

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THIS volume is the result of an attempt to bring together in a single collection the documents which contain the constitution of the Dominion of Canada and illustrate its historical development. A much larger number of documents might legitimately have been included under this description, but the line had to be drawn somewhere, and I have chosen to draw it between those that are of international and imperial origin on the one hand, and those that have resulted from the exercise of colonial autonomy on the other. Any apparent violations of this principle of classification have been dictated by considerations of convenience which are too obvious to call for specific mention. Many documents that are either not imperial or not constitutional have been added in the form of appendixes to the text. It is hoped that they will prove to be not the least useful part of the collection.

Where the material to choose from is abundant and the space is limited there will always be differences of opinion as to what should properly be included. While I have received much valuable advice on this point from eminent statesmen and publicists, I feel bound to say, in justice alike to them and myself, that the plan of the work is essentially my own. My belief that the true line of development of the Canadian constitution takes us back, not to the French regime in Canada, but to the colonial governments of what is now the United States is sufficient to account for the absence of all French documents, except the articles of capitulation of Quebec and Montreal. If space had permitted I would gladly have inserted as appendixes some of the constitutional documents of the British colonies ; I have been forced to content myself with the United States constitution, on which, as regards federal form, our own is avowedly modelled.

I have made no attempt to interpret the documents here collected. Mine was the humbler but infinitely more useful task, to see that the texts were as correct as possible, and to give in the form of notes such historical information and references as would tend to lighten the labours of the student without supplying him with ready-made opinions. Alike in selection and annotation I have had primarily in view the needs of students of political and legal science in universities and law schools, and the chief aim of the collection—to give them a chance to think for themselves—would have been defeated if I had impertinently undertaken to think for them and give them the results.

Gratitude for valuable aid and counsel requires that I should mention the names of those who have been specially helpful to me. Easily first must be placed Dr. Bourinot, Mr. Douglas Brymner, and Mr. William Kingsford, each of whom has in his own way usefully illustrated Canadian history. To Thomas Hodgins, Q.C., Æmilius Irving, Q.C., and Hon. David Mills, Q.C., I am indebted for hints which lessened greatly the labor of research. To Mr. Francis Parkman of Boston, and Mr. Justin Winsor of Harvard University, my thanks are due for prompt responses to requests for information on historically doubtful points. Mr. James Bain of the Toronto free library, Mr. J. P. Macdonnell of the Ontario Civil Service, Mr. David Boyle of the Canadian Institute, J. M. McEvoy, B.A. of the University of Toronto, and A. F. Chamberlain, M.A., of Clarke University, have all taken a warm personal interest in the progress of the work and rendered practical and valuable assistance in its preparation.

INTRODUCTION.

THE purpose of this introduction is to explain briefly the author's views on the teaching of history in general and of Canadian constitutional history in particular. They may be summed up in the statement that while ex cathedra lectures are an antiquated and ineffective method of dealing with any subject in the class-room, they are particularly out of place in the academic treatment of history. It is of course important that the student should have a wide acquaintance with historical facts, and that he should have well-defined opinions as to the general principles that underlie and explain them ; but in so far as the educative value of the subject is concerned, the manner in which he acquires his knowledge and arrives at his opinions is of far greater importance than the knowledge and the opinions themselves. Facts that are simply memorized and principles that are simply appropriated, whether from text books read or lectures heard, count for little in real education ; facts that are discovered by patient research and principles that are reasoned out from the facts, serve a really useful educative purpose.

History is one of the inductive sciences, and it should be dealt with on the inductive method. The student should be required to collect facts for himself by the investigation of such sources as may be available, instead of learning them by rote from treatises or lectures, and he should be encouraged and required to form and express his own opinions, instead of adopting those formulated for his instruction by the historian or the lecturer. His collection of historical facts will undoubtedly be meagre and his opinions will probably be wrong, but this is no more than can with the most perfect truth be said of every one who either writes a text-book or delivers a lecture. The difference is one of degree only, and fortunately the question of more or less is of little consequence educationally, provided that the student's acquaintance with the subject is the result of his own honest endeavor to get at the truth, not of his assimilation of the opinions of other people. The degree of culture that results from the academical use of history is determined, not by the fact that knowledge of a certain kind has been acquired, but by the fact that knowledge of some kind has been acquired in a certain way.

The truth of these statements will become more evident if it be borne in mind that the mass of historical facts is a shifting quicksand. Every now and then some new writer—a Gardiner, a Freeman, or a Stubbs—re-explores the old familiar ground, unearths a number of facts that cannot be rejected or ignored, and erects on the enlarged basis a modified inductive superstructure. It would be absurd to suppose that the last word on the subjects of which they treat has been said even by them. History is not only, from the pedagogical point of view at least, a science but it is one of the most progressive of the sciences, and any method of academical treatment that does not put the student in possession of a method of investigation, and at the same time tend to free him from prejudices and preconceptions, is worse than useless for purposes of culture.

Fortunately some progress has been made in this direction by the introduction of the "seminary method" into universities and colleges, and history has benefitted more from the change than almost any other subject. In all progressive American institutions the seminary is rapidly superseding the lecture, and the latter retains a foothold only in places which do not come under this description. In a very short time such academical performances as "lectures," in the sense of formal ex cathedra deliverances of professorial opinions will be unknown, and the consummation of the change cannot take place too soon. In the lecture-room the teacher works after a fashion, and the students are supposed to absorb the erudition that has been carefully stored up and is now poured forth for their benefit; in the seminary the student works under the direction of the teacher, who saves him time in his search for facts but carefully abstains from any attempt to control his reason. It is easy to understand the nature of the change effected in the academical atmosphere by the substitution of the seminary for the lecture method. The result is nothing less than the substitution of intellectual life for intellectual death. It has been so wherever the change has taken place; it will be so everywhere else when the change does take place.

The great merit of the seminary is that it facilitates the use of the inductive method, which the lecture system absolutely precludes. Induction is a species of reasoning, and the lecturer cannot teach by reasoning for his students and telling them his conclusions. They must do their own reasoning, draw their own inferences, discover their own principles, establish their own laws. They may do this erroneously, but they must do it if they are to derive any intellectual training from the academical use of history, and especially of political history. Mere soundness of opinion is fortunately of less importance, where no one can be absolutely and indisputably right, than are open-mindedness, freedom from prejudice, and the habit of closely observing phenomena and reasoning from them.

"History is past politics and politics present history," says Mr. Freeman, and this is but another way of saying that past and present states of political society throw light upon each other. Usually history is taught as if the past served in this respect the more important purpose of the two. The student is asked to begin at the beginning and come down through a series of more or less arbitrarily selected events and institutions until he makes the acquaintance of the state of society which is his own environment, if indeed he is allowed to come so near. It is easy to see how such a view of historical method should have been universally acted upon at a time when method claimed little attention and received less; it is difficult to understand why it is still generally practised at a time when the study of methods is occupying the attention of the foremost intellects of the day. It is perhaps too much to expect the present generation of professorial lecturers on history and politics to abandon the only method they know anything about, but it will not be incumbent on their successors to submit to conventional and traditional limitations.

The true method of teaching history, as of teaching other subjects that lend themselves to inductive treatment, is to pass from the known to the unknown, to start from the here and now and travel backward and outward until the entire ground has been covered. The student should begin with the history and the institutions of his own time and his own country, and his knowledge of these will enable him to understand the history and the institutions of other times and of other lands. All valuable knowledge is comparative. One never knows anything thoroughly until he has compared or contrasted it with something else. His progress in real culture is conditioned on a never ending process of differentiation of things that are similar to each other, and of assimilation of things that are different from each other. If the study of the past is helpful to the comprehension of the present much more is the study of the present helpful to the comprehension of the past. The reason is obvious. It is extremely difficult to form a clear or useful conception of what is distant either in time or in place; it is comparatively easy to form a clear conception of what is within the range of every day experience. It would be unreasonable to expect such a conception as a student can form of the Roman comitia to be helpful to him in comprehending the nature of an American town meeting, or such a conception as he can form of an Old English witenagemot to aid him in understanding the functions of a modern parliament; but to comprehend clearly the nature of a town meeting or a parliament will aid him in getting a useful conception of the comitia or witenagemot, and he can make a study of both town meeting and parliament in actual operation.

This view of method in relation to history is especially true of constitutional history, which is substantially a digest of human experience in the development of governmental machinery. It is more limited and more definite than general history, and is, both in its own nature and in the methods applicable to its acamedical use, closely akin to legal science. No subject in a university curriculum is better suited for inductive treatment than constitutional history, and therefore no subject, apart altogether from its intrinsic interest in relation to the advancement of civilization, is more valuable as an educative instrument. The line of causation is usually discernible with a minimum of uncertainty as to the correctness of the results arrived at, and the number of phenomena to be observed, analyzed, and classified as a basis of induction are for the most part not open to reasonable dispute as matters of fact.

To a greater or less extent in every country the history of the constitution is to be traced by means of documents, the correct interpretation of which is, in relation to the subject and for other reasons, a matter of the greatest importance. Usually the student is deprived of the valuable training afforded by the practice of hermeneutics, because he is expected to learn the meaning of a document either from a text-book writer's gloss or from a lecturer's interpretation. That both writer and lecturer may be wrong in their opinions is the least regrettable feature of this system, because, fortunately, neither gloss nor interpretation is likely to be long remembered after the examination in preparation for which they have been "crammed" by the student; infinitely more mischievous is the waste of time and opportunity which might have been utilized in enabling him to master a method that would have made him ever afterwards independent of text-books and lecturers by placing him on a par with both. If their opinions are right he should be put in possession not of them but of the way to arrive at them by his own unaided efforts; if they are wrong he has at least a chance of avoiding some errors which he must on the ordinary plan imbibe, if it be but for a time. The same remarks apply mutatis mutandis to the generalization of constitutional principles from those events that come under the name of precedents. Acquaintance with certain facts must be made by reference to narratives, but their relation to each other as antecedents and consequents, if not as causes and effects, must be established by an exercise of reason. The reasoning in this case must be the student's own if he is to benefit educationally by the time given to the subject, and he must reason from consequent to antecedent, if a premium is not to be put on the mere exercise of memory.

It is interesting to note that in some respects the constitutional history of Canada is better adapted for academical use than the constitutional history of either England or the United States, which is equivalent to saying that it surpasses in that respect the constitutional history of any other country where-soever. The constitutional history of the United States is too largely a written history; that of England is too largely an unwritten one. In the one country precedent counts for too little in the interest of speculation; in the other it counts for too much in the interest of definiteness. The history of the Canadian constitution involves a great deal of documentary interpretation, but it involves also a great deal of generalization from recorded instances. The constitution at present bears a strong resemblance in form to that of the United States, and it would have been surprising if it had not done so, in view of the fact that it was avowedly modelled upon it; but it bears an equally strong, though less easily discerned, similarity in its mode of operation to that of England, through the adoption from the latter of the constitutional device known as "responsible government." For purposes of inductive treatment, therefore, it possesses most of the merits of each, being at the same time comparatively free from the defects of either, while the colonial position of Canada is from the academical point of view an advantage rather than otherwise. At every stage of Canadian history the ultimate political sovereignty has been, as it now is, vested in the British Parliament, and constitutional complications, at once caused and resolved by the gradual tendency towards colonial autonomy, impart to the subject an interest that is quite unique in the whole range of comparative constitutional history.

A similarly unique interest attaches to the study of jurisprudence and of international law in connection with Canadian history. In the Province of Quebec ever since the passage of the Quebec Act in 1774 French law has been the recognized rule of decision in all matters of controversy relating to property and civil rights, and the codification of French law in Quebec followed its codification in France. On the other hand the common law of England is the rule of decision in all the other Canadian Provinces, and therefore it is quite possible for a Canadian student to take up the study of either the common or the civil law as a living system without going beyond the boundaries of his own country, and to study them inductively in comparison or contrast with each other. As the State of Louisiana has a civil code, while all the other States of the Union have the common law, the student in the United States has a similar privilege, but in a less convenient field. Canada as a quasi-autonomous country enjoys quasi international relations, and is saddled with quasi international responsibilities, but of formal relation or formal responsibility she has none. She is allowed a real voice in the making of treaties with the United States, and is permitted and expected to supplement them with legislation when legislation is necessary; but on the other hand her representatives in international negotiations are formally appointed by the British Government, and if the Canadian Parliament were to refuse the necessary confirmatory legislation the British Parliament could in any case, and probably would in some cases, enact it.

It is unnecessary to describe at any length the manner in which the following documents may be most advantageously used. All that need be attempted is to lay down a few general propositions, in the application of which there will be room for an infinite variety of pedagogical devices. No two teachers will ever deal with them in precisely the same way; no progressive teacher will ever deal with them in precisely the same way with successive classes. These general propositions, with the reasons on which they are founded, may be thus briefly stated:—

1. The first document taken up should be the British North America Act of 1867, which is the present constitution of Canada. It should be studied with a view to ascertaining its textual meaning, determining its legal validity, and comprehending its political working. It is a matter of minor importance in what order these various lines of inquiry are prosecuted, but the order here stated is not without certain obvious advantages. The Act abounds in technical terms, and failure to catch their precise meaning must needs leave an obscure impression of the import of the statute as a whole. As examples of terms that stand in need of elucidation may be cited such expressions as "Privy Council," "Executive Council," "privileges" and "immunities" of Parliament, "seised," "freehold," "free and common soccage," "franc-alieu," "in rotture," "allegiance," "Royal assent," "disallow," "royalties." To appreciate clearly the force of these and analogous expressions is not all that is necessary to the comprehension of the text, but it is at least a good first step towards it. The legal validity of the document is due to the fact that it is the Act of a sovereign Parliament, but it is an Act that embodies a compact between the federating Provinces. Its legal effect must be determined by judicial decisions, but in the reasoning on which those decisions are based some account must be taken of the intentions of the parties to the federation. Already a long line of judicial findings has laid the foundation of an interesting and important constitutional jurisprudence for Canada. The political working of the constitution is a wide subject, but one that cannot be evaded. All who know anything about it can understand that the student of the mere letter, however thorough and expert, may go out into public or professional life loaded up with the most absurd misconceptions. Nothing is said in the British North America Act, for instance, about the responsibility of the Governor-General's cabinet, or of its solidarity, and yet these are among its most important features. Not much is said, except what is now misleading, as to the manner of electing the House of Commons. The financial relations of the Provinces to the Dominion have been extensively changed since the Act was passed. The fiscal system has been modified, either slightly or radically, over and over again. These are only a few of the matters which come under the head of "political working," but they will serve to give some idea of the comprehensiveness of the phrase. In connection with both the textual meaning and the political working of the Act the commissions and instructions issued to the Governor-General should be read, indeed must be read, in order to get a clear idea of either the one or the other, and closely connected with the subject of the legal validity of the constitution is the Act of 1865, which states the grounds on which the validity or invalidity of colonial legislation must be determined. It is needless to say that the Imperial Acts of 1871, 1875, and 1886, supplementary to the Act of 1867, must now be read with it, just as if they were part of its text.

2. The British North America Act should be compared or contrasted with other constitutional documents, to which it is more or less closely related either formally or historically. Pre-eminent among these is, of course, the constitution of the United States. The analytical comparison between them, should, without being too minute in detail, be so carefully made as to enable the student to grasp the essential differences between the constitutions of the two countries, not merely as a matter of textual interpretation but also in their respective political operations. These differences have been frequently and accurately described, but they must none the less be thought out by each generation of students for themselves; and this can be done only as the result of a careful analytical comparison. The "Quebec Resolutions" of 1864, which embody the agreement originally entered into by the various parties to the Canadian Confederation, should receive a certain amount of attention in this connection. More important, however, are the Imperial enactments which chronologically precede the British North America Act of 1867, and each of which was in turn the Canadian Constitution—the Union Act of 1840, the Constitutional Act of 1791, the Quebec Act of 1774, and the Royal Proclamation of 1763. These have a relation to the present constitution that is not merely historical; the nature of that relation can be ascertained only by the comparative method, and the comparison should be made by each student for himself.

In the last analysis some part of what he should discover may escape him, but he ought not on that account to be deprived of the chance to try what he can do.

3. These constitutional documents should be taken up in the inverse chronological order. The comparison should be one of consequent with antecedent for the purpose of ascertaining the causal relation between them. It is easy to dogmatise in history by alleging that a certain condition precedent is sufficient to account for a certain other condition which succeeds it, the cause being studied before the effect; the safer and better way is to acquaint oneself with the condition that is the effect, and then proceed to search for some previous condition that will suffice to explain it. The former course puts a premium on dogmatism and memorization; the latter encourages reasoning and research. It is needless to say that these documents should be studied in their relation to each other, as well as their relation to the British North America Act. They are the milestones of constitutional progress, and the nature of the intervals between them must be clearly made out by him who would read them aright.

4. The documents which precede the Royal Proclamation are all constitutionally important—the Treaty of Paris as containing the precise definition of the concessions made by the British to the French Government when Canada passed finally under British dominion; the Articles of Capitulation as the chronological background of the treaty stipulations; and the documents relating to the establishment of parliamentary government in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and New Brunswick, whose representative institutions have enjoyed a continuous existence ever since.

5. Finally the class work should be done on the seminary plan. Anything of the nature of a lecture is hopelessly out of place. That nondescript kind of intercourse between teacher and taught which is connoted by the term “socratic method” is the ideal to be attained. The teacher, as conductor of the seminary exercises, should be nothing more than the first amongst equals. The relationship between him and his students should be such as would obtain among a band of searchers after truth, each of the others having as good a right as he has to believe and maintain that he has discovered it. Written exercises should form a constant feature of class work, and these exercises should in turn become subjects of class discussion. Only by frequent applications of the test of committing views to paper can the rate or the character of the progress made be accurately ascertained. The assumption that a single written examination at the end of a course is a fair or useful criterion of a student's attainments is as untenable as the assumption that mere accumulations of knowledge, without any reference to the manner in which it has been acquired, have any real educational value. The single terminal examination has outlived whatever usefulness it ever had, and it must shortly follow, if it does not precede, the ex cathedra lecture into academical oblivion.

EXTRACTS FROM THE TREATY OF UTRECHT,¹ 1718.

The Treaty of Peace and Friendship between the Most Serene and Most Potent Princess Anne, by the Grace of God, Queen of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, and the Most Serene and Most Potent Prince Lewis the XIVth, the Most Serene and Most Potent Christian King, concluded at Utrecht, the ³¹ day of ^{March,} ~~April,~~ 1713.²

I. That there be an universal peace, and true and sincere friendship, between the most Serene and most Potent Princess Anne, Queen of Great Britain, and the most Serene and most Potent Prince Lewis the XIVth, the most Christian King, and their heirs and successors, as also the kingdoms, states, and subjects of both, as well without as within Europe;

X. The said most Christian King shall restore to the kingdom and Queen of Great Britain, to be possessed in full right for ever, the bay and streights of Hudson,³ together with all lands, seas, sea-coasts, rivers, and places situate in the said bay and streights, and what belong thereunto, no tracts of land being excepted, which are at present possessed by the subjects of France. All which, as well as any buildings there made, in the condition they now are, and likewise all fortresses there erected, either before or since the French seized the same, shall, within six months from the ratification of the present treaty, or sooner if possible, be well and truly delivered to the British subjects, having commission from the Queen of Great Britain to demand and receive the same, entire and undiminished, together with all the cannon and cannon-ball which are therein, as also with a quantity of powder, if it be there found, in proportion to the cannon-ball, and with the other provision of war usually belonging to cannon. It is, however, provided, that it may be entirely free for the company of Quebec, and all other subjects of the most Christian King whatsoever, to go by land or by sea, whithersoever they please, out of the lands of the said bay, together with all their goods, merchandizes, arms, and effects, of what nature and condition soever, except such things as are above reserved in this article. But it is agreed on both sides, to determine within a year, by commissaries to be forthwith named by each party, the limits which are to be fixed between the said Bay of Hudson and the places appertaining to the French;⁴ which limits both the British and French subjects shall be wholly forbid to pass over, or thereby to go to each other by sea or by land. The same commissaries shall also have orders to describe and settle, in like manner, the boundaries between the other British and French colonies in those parts.

XI. The above-mentioned most Christian Kings shall take care that satisfaction be given, according to the rule of justice and equity, to the English company trading to the Bay of Hudson, for all damages and spoil done to their colonies, ships, persons, and goods, by the hostile incursions and depredations of the French, in time of peace, an estimate being made thereof by commissaries to be named at the requisition of each party. The same commissaries shall moreover inquire as well into the complaints of the British subjects concerning ships taken by the French in time of peace, as also concerning the damages sustained last year in the island called Montserrat, and others, as into those things of which the French subjects complain, relating to the capitulation in the island of Nevis, and Castle of Gambia, also to French ships, if perchance any such have been taken by British subjects in time of peace; and in like manner into all disputes of this kind, which shall be found to have arisen between both nations; and due justice shall be done on both sides without delay.

XII. The most Christian King shall take care to have delivered to the Queen of Great Britain, on the same day that the ratification of this treaty shall be exchanged, solemn and authentic letters or instruments, by virtue of which it shall appear that the island of St. Christopher's is to be possessed alone hereafter by British subjects, likewise all Nova Scotia or Acadie, with its ancient boundaries,^a as also the city of Port Royal, now called Annapolis Royal, and all other things in those parts which depend on the said lands and islands, together with the dominion, propriety, and possession of the said islands, lands, and places, and all right whatsoever, by treaties or by any other way obtained, which the most Christian King, the Crown of France, or any the subjects thereof, have hitherto had to the said islands, lands, and places, and the inhabitants of the same, are yielded and made over to the Queen of Great Britain, and to her Crown, for ever, as the most Christian King doth at present yield and make over all the particulars above said^a; and that in such ample manner and form that the subjects of the most Christian King shall hereafter be excluded from all kind of fishing in the said seas, bays, and other places, on the coasts of Nova Scotia, that is to say on those which lie towards the east, within 30 leagues, beginning from the island commonly called Sable, inclusively, and thence stretching along toward the south-west.

XIII. The island called Newfoundland, with the adjacent islands, shall from this time forward belong of right wholly to Britain; and to that end the town and fortress of Placentia, and whatever other places in the said island are in the possession of the French, shall be yielded and given up, within seven months from the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, or sooner, if possible, by the most Christian King, to those who have a commission from the Queen of Great Britain for that purpose. Nor shall the most Christian King, his heirs and successors, or any of their subjects, at any time hereafter, lay claim to any right to the said island and islands, or to any part of it or them. Moreover, it shall not be lawful for the subjects of France to fortify any place in the said island of Newfoundland, or to erect any buildings there, besides stages made of boards, and huts necessary and useful for drying of fish; or to resort to the said island, beyond the time necessary for fishing and drying of fish. But it shall be allowed to the subjects of France to catch fish, and to dry them on land, in that part only, and in no other besides that, of the said island of Newfoundland, which stretches from the place called Cape Bonavista to the northern point of the said island, and from thence running down by the western side, reaches as far as the place called Point Riche.⁷ But the island called Cape Breton, as also all others, both in the mouth of the river of St. Lawrence and in the gulf of the same name, shall hereafter belong of right to the French, and the most Christian King shall have all manner of liberty to fortify any place or places there.⁸

XIV. It is expressly provided that in all the said places and colonies to be yielded and restored by the most Christian King, in pursuance of this treaty, the subjects of the said King may have liberty to remove themselves within a year to any other place, as they shall think fit, together with all their moveable effects. But those who are willing to remain there, and to be subject to the kingdom of Great Britain, are to enjoy the free exercise of their religion according to the usage of the Church of Rome, as far as the laws of Great Britain do allow the same.⁹

XV. The subjects of France inhabiting Canada, and others, shall hereafter give no hindrance or molestation to the five nations or cantons of Indians, subject to the Dominion of Great Britain, nor to the other natives of America, who are friends to the same. In like manner the subjects of Great Britain shall behave themselves peaceably towards the Americans who are subjects or friends to France; and on both sides they shall enjoy full liberty of going and coming on account of trade. As also the natives of those countries shall, with the same liberty, resort as they please to the British and French colonists, for promoting trade on the one side and the other, without any molestation or hindrance, either on the part of the British subjects or of the French. But it is to be exactly and distinctly settled by commissaries, who are, and who ought to be accounted the subjects and friends of Britain or of France.

NOTES TO THE TREATY OF UTRECHT.

² The two dates here given are according to the Old Style and the New Style; the latter had been adopted by France in 1582, and it was not adopted in England till 1751.

³ For the Charter of the Hudson Bay Company see Ontario Sessional Papers, vol. xi, No. 31.

REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLIES IN THE MARITIME PROVINCES.¹Nova Scotia.²1. *The Introduction of British Settlement and of Civil Government.*³

WHITEHALL, 7th March, 1749.

A proposal having been presented unto His Majesty for the establishing a civil government in the Province of Nova Scotia, in North America, as also for the better peopling and settling the said Province, and extending and improving the fishery thereof, by granting lands within the same, and giving other encouragement to such of the officers and private men lately dismissed His Majesty's land and sea service, as shall be willing to settle in said Province. And His Majesty having signed his royal approbation of the report of the said proposals, the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations,⁴ do by His Majesty's commands give notice⁵ that proper encouragement will be given to such of the officers and private men lately dismissed⁶ His Majesty's Land and Sea Service as are willing to accept of grants of land, and to settle with or without families in Nova Scotia. That fifty acres of land will be granted in fee simple to every private soldier or seaman, free from the payment of any quit rents or taxes for the term of ten years, at the expiration whereof no person to pay more than one shilling per annum for every fifty acres so granted.

GEORGE THE SECOND, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, etc. To our trusty and well-beloved, the Honorable EDWARD CORNWALLIS, Esquire, Greeting. Whereas we did by our letters patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, bearing date at Westminster the eleventh day of September in the second year of our reign, constitute and appoint Richard Philipp's,¹¹ Esquire, our Captain General and Governor in Chief, in and over our Province of Nova Scotia or Acadie¹² in America, with all the rights, members and appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging, for and during our will and pleasure; as by the said recited letters patent, relation being thereunto had, may more fully and at large appear.

And for the better administration of justice, and the management of the public affairs of our said Province, we hereby give and grant unto you, the said Edward Cornwallis, full power and authority to chuse, nominate, and appoint such fitting and discreet persons as you shall either find there or carry along with you not exceeding the number of Twelve, to be of our Council¹² in our said Province. As also to nominate and appoint by warrant under your hand and seal all such other officers and ministers as you shall judge proper and necessary for our service and the good of the people whom we shall settle in our said Province until our further will and pleasure shall be known.

And our will and pleasure is, that you the said Edward Cornwallis, (after the publication of these our letters patent) do take the Oaths appointed to be taken by an Act¹³ passed in the first year of his late Majesty's, our Royal father's reign, entitled "An Act for the further security of His Majesty's Person and Government and the succession of the Crown in the Heirs of the late Princess Sophia, being Protestants, and for extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales and his open and secret abettors." All which said oaths and declaration our Council in our said province, or any five of the members thereof, have hereby full power and authority and are required to tender and administer unto you and in your absence to our Lieutenant Governor, if there be any upon the place, all which being duly performed you shall administer unto each of the members of our said Council, as also to our Lieutenant Governor, if there be any such upon the place, the said oaths mentioned in the said Act entitled "An Act for the further security of His Majesty's Person and Government and the succession of the Crown in the Heirs of the late Princess Sophia, being Protestants, and for extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales and his open and secret abettors;" as also to cause them to make and subscribe the afore-mentioned declaration and to administer to them the oath for the due execution of their places and trusts.

And we do hereby give & grant unto you full power and authority to suspend any of the members of our said Council to be appointed by you as aforesaid from sitting, voting, and assisting therein if you shall find just cause for so doing.

And if it shall at any time happen that by the death, departure out of our said Province, suspension of any of our said Councilors, or otherwise, there shall be a vacancy in our said Council (any five whereof we do hereby appoint to be a quorum), our will and pleasure is that you signify the same unto us by the first opportunity that we may under our signet & sign manuel constitute and appoint others in their stead.

But that our affairs at that distance may not suffer for want of a due number of Councilors, if ever it shall happen that there shall be less than nine of them residing in our said Province, we hereby give and grant unto you the said Edward Cornwallis full power and authority to chuse as many persons out of the principal freeholders inhabitants thereof as will make up the full number of our said Council to be nine and no more; which persons so chosen and appointed by you shall be to all intents and purposes Councilors in our said Province until either they shall be confirmed by us, or that by the nomination of others by us under our sign manuel or signet our said Council shall have nine or more persons in it.

And we do hereby give and grant unto you full power & authority, with the advice and consent of our said Council, from time to time as need shall require, to summon and call General Assemblies of the Freeholders and Planters within your Government according to the usage of the rest of our Colonies & Plantations in America.¹⁵

And that you the said Edward Cornwallis with the advice and consent of our said Council and Assembly, or the major part of them respectively, shall have full power and authority to make, constitute, and ordain Laws, Statutes, & Ordinances for the Publick peace, welfare & good government of our said province and of the people and inhabitants thereof and such others as shall resort thereto, & for the benefit of us, our heirs and successors, which said Laws, Statutes, and Ordinances are not to be repugnant, but as near as may be agreeable, to the Laws and Statutes of this our Kingdom of Great Britain.¹⁶

Provided that all such Laws, Statutes & Ordinances, of what nature or duration so ever be within three months or sooner after the making thereof transmitted to us under our Seal of Nova Scotia for our approbation or disallowance thereof, as also duplicates by the next conveyance.

And to the end that nothing may be passed or done by our said Council or Assembly to the prejudice of us our Heirs & Successors, we will & ordain that you the said Edward Cornwallis shall have and enjoy a negative voice in the making and passing of all Laws, Statutes & Ordinances as aforesaid.

And we do hereby give & grant unto you full power and authority by & with the advice and consent of our said Council of Nova Scotia, to erect, raise & build in our said Province such & so many forts & plat-forms, castles, citys, boroughs, towns & fortifications as you by the advice aforesaid shall judge necessary, and the same or any of them to fortify and furnish with ordnance, ammunition & all sorts of arms fit and necessary for the security and defence of our said Province, and by the advice aforesaid the same again, or any of them. to demolish or dismantle as may be most convenient.

3. Extract from a Letter of Governor Lawrence¹⁹ to the Lords of Trade and Plantations.

JANY. 12TH, 1755.

I acquainted your Lordships in a former Letter that Mr. Pownall had, as from your Lordships expressed to the Chief Justice some doubts about the Legislative authority of the Council.²⁰ I now transmit your Lordships his opinion thereon it is a case I am by no means a competent judge of but that power has hitherto passed unquestioned in this Colony, and I doubt not but your Lordships are well satisfied by both the Governors²¹ that have gone home, how impossible it is in our present circumstances, to call an assembly, and what numberless inconveniences would attend the collecting a set of people such as are to be found in this Province, in that shape, until we are better prepared for it, or it is in their power to grant money towards defraying the public expense.

CHARLES LAWRENCE.

4. Extract from a Letter of the Lords of Trade and Plantations to Governor Lawrence, dated

WHITEHALL, MAY 7TH, 1755.

Immediately upon the receipt of your Letter, we took into Consideration the observations made by the Chief Justice upon the power of the Governor & Council of Nova Scotia, to pass Laws without an assembly, and as it appeared to us to be a matter of very great consequence, We transmitted those observations together with such parts of His Majesty's Commission and Instructions as related to the passing of Laws to His Majesty's Attorney & Solicitor Genl. for their opinion upon this point, and having received their report, we herewith inclose to you a copy of it for your Guidance and Direction, and though the calling of an Assembly may in the present circumstances of the Colony be difficult and attended with some inconveniences, yet as the Attorney and Solicitor General are of opinion that the Governor and Council have no power to enact Laws, we cannot see how the Government can be properly carried on without such an Assembly; We desire therefore you will immediately consult with his Majesty's Chief Justice in what manner an Assembly can be most properly convened, of what number of members it shall consist, how those members shall be elected, and what rules and methods of proceeding it may be necessary to prescribe for them, transmitting to us as soon as possible Your Opinion and Report thereupon, in as full and explicit a manner as possible, to the end We may lay this matter before His Majesty for His Majesty's further Directions therein.

As the Validity, however, of the Laws enacted by the Governor and Council, or the authority of those acting under them, do not appear to have been hitherto questioned, It is of the greatest consequence to the Peace and Welfare of the Province that the opinion of His Majesty's Attorney & Solicitor General should not be made public untill an Assembly can be convened and an Indemnification passed for such Acts as have been done under Laws enacted without any proper authority.

5. Opinion of the Attorney and Solicitor General.

Pursuant to your Lordships' desire Signified to Us by Mr. Hill in his Letter of the 31st of March last, setting forth, that a doubt having arisen whether the Governor and Council of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia have a Power of enacting Laws within the said Province, and Jonathan Belcher, Esq., having transmitted to your Lordships his observations thereupon inclosing to Us a Copy of the said Observations together with Copys of several clauses in the Commission and Instructions of the said Governor of that Province referred to (all which are herewith returned) and desiring our opinion, whether the said Governor and Council have or have not a Power to enact Laws for the public Peace, Welfare and good Government of the said Province and the People and the Inhabitants thereof.

We have taken the said Observations and clauses into Our Consideration and are humbly of opinion that the Governor and Council alone are not authorized by His Majesty to make Laws till there can be an Assembly.

His Majesty has ordered the Government of the Infant Colony to be pursuant to his Commission and Instructions and such further Directions as He should give under his Sign Manual or by Order in Council.

All of which is humbly submitted to Your Lordships Consideration.

7. Extract from Letter of Lords of Trade to Governor Lawrence.

WHITEHALL, FEBY. 7, 1758.

We have fully considered that part of your Letter which relates to the calling an Assembly, and also the Plan for that purpose, contained in the minutes of the Council transmitted with it, and having so often and so fully repeated to you our sense and opinion of the propriety & necessity of this measure taking place, it only now remains for Us to direct its being carried into immediate execution, that His Majesty's subjects (great part of whom are alleged to have quitted the Province on account of the great discontent prevailing for want of an Assembly) may no longer be deprived of that privilege, which was promised to them by His Majesty, when the Settlement of this Colony was first undertaken, and was one of the conditions upon which they accepted the Proposals then made. We are sensible that the Execution of this measure may in the present situation of the Colony be attended with many difficulties, and possibly may in its consequences, in some respects interfere with, and probably embarrass His Majesty's service; but without regard to these Considerations, or to what may be the opinion of individuals with respect to this measure, We think it of indispensable necessity that it should be immediately carried into execution.

NOTES TO REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLIES IN THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

³ The interval between 1713 and 1749 was occupied by conflicts with the French settlers of the district along the Bay of Fundy, and with the Indians who were allied with the French. The seat of British authority was Annapolis, and the country was under military rule. The centre of French influence and operations was Louisburg, which was taken by an expedition from New England in 1745, but was restored to France by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1747. The project outlined in this paper was prompted by a desire to create in Nova Scotia a British settlement that would prove a real counterpoise to Cape Breton.

⁵ This notice was inserted as an advertisement in the London Gazette of March, 1749.

⁶ On account of the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle two years before.

⁷ See the similar grants specified in the Royal Proclamation, 1763.

¹⁰ Philipps was appointed Governor in 1719, and again in 1728. The Commission issued in the latter year is the one here referred to. It is printed in full in the Sessional Papers of the Dominion Parliament, vol. xvi., No. 70.

¹¹ See Note 5 to the Treaty of Utrecht.

¹² There had been a Council before, but its membership was increased by this Commission. After the creation of the Assembly in 1758 it was both an Executive and a Legislative Council till 1838, when Lord Durham took steps to separate the two functions and assign them to distinct bodies. See the instructions to Lord Durham in the Dom. Sess. Papers, vol. xvi., No. 70.

¹³ 1 George I. cap. 13.

¹⁴ 23 Charles II. cap. 2.

¹⁵ For a history of the constitutional machinery of the various British Provinces in America see Bancroft's "History of the United States of America," edition of 1886. Lodge's "Short History of the English Colonies in America" is a good summary of the subject. A collection of colonial documents, including the most important charters, was published as early as 1792 in Philadelphia by Ebenezer Hazard. See also "The Federal and State Constitutions, Colonial Charters, and other Organic Laws of the United States," compiled by Ben. Perley Poore, Washington, 1877. Several of the Assemblies referred to in the text had been in active operation for more than a century before the settlement of Halifax.

¹⁷ When Governor Lawrence died, somewhat suddenly, in 1760, Chief Justice Belcher, who was at that time President of the Council, administered the Government.

¹⁸ See the signatures appended to the commission to Governor Paterson of Prince Edward Island, Governor Carleton of New Brunswick, and Governor Murray of Quebec. In Maseres' "Collection of Commissions," the commission to Sir Danvers Osborn as Governor of New York, 1754, is signed "Yorke and Yorke."

²⁰ The "Mr. Pownall" here mentioned was John Pownall, Secretary to the Board of Trade and Plantations. The Chief Justice was Jonathan Belcher, son of Gov. Belcher, of Massachusetts. He had studied law in England, and been appointed Chief Justice in 1754. Both he and Mr. Pownall were well acquainted with the working of colonial Assemblies.

²¹ Cornwallis and Hopson.

²² Attorney-General Murray shortly afterwards became Lord Chief Justice Mansfield. The opinion is here given without reasons, but some light may be thrown on the latter by a perusal of Lord Mansfield's judgment in Campbell v. Hall.

²⁴ See similar oaths in the Quebec Act, 1774, and the Constitutional Act, 1791.

²⁵ Gov. Lawrence, in a letter written on the 26th of December, 1758, informs the Lords of Trade and Plantations that the first Assembly had met and "passed a number of laws." He confessed that he was agreeably disappointed at the way in which it did its work.

²⁷ See the Royal Proclamation of 1763, which created the Province of Quebec.

²⁸ For the political status of Cape Breton see Appendix M.

³¹ The remainder of the Commission is virtually identical with the Commissions to Governor Cornwallis, of Nova Scotia, and Governor Paterson, of Prince Edward Island, except that a clause is inserted transferring the custody of idiots and lunatics, and their estates, from the Imperial to the Provincial authorities.

NOTES TO THE CAPITULATION OF QUEBEC.

sions are printed almost identically in Knox's "Historical Journal," in the New York "Documents," and in the "Annual Register" for 1759 (p. 247). Knox's text has been here followed as he was on the spot.

² Knox spells the name "De Ramsay." In the "Memoire" referred to in note 1, which was written by himself, he spells it "De Ramezay." This "Memoire" was found by M. Faribault in 1852, in the Archives of the Bureau de la Marine, where to all appearance it had lain from the time when the author prepared it as a defence of himself against the charge of having too hastily surrendered Quebec after the death of Montcalm.

⁶ Then encamped at St. Augustin, "four leagues from Quebec." From this headquarters he wrote on the 21st of September to M. Berryer in France a brief account of the battle between Wolfe and Montcalm, and of the subsequent surrender of Quebec, which he characterized as premature and contrary to orders.

NOTES TO THE CAPITULATION OF MONTREAL.

and other posts which they now occupy, until the time when they shall be embarked for their departure. Passports, however, shall be granted to those who shall want them, for the different places of the colony, to go and attend to their affairs.

As to the officers of the militia, the militia-men, and the Acadians who are prisoners in New England, they shall be sent back to their countries.

JEFF. AMHERST.

Edmund Burke, who probably obtained his copy from the original in the Colonial office. In the translation of the French articles use has been made of the version given by Knox, and also of the version given in the New York "Documents," which in some respects differs from it. The translation in the "Annual Register" is substantially identical with the one given by Knox. The shortness of the time which elapsed between the first communication from De Vaudreuil to Amherst, and the submission of the former's stipulations for the latter's consideration seems to show that De Vaudreuil, as in the case of Quebec, had for some time been meditating the surrender of the place and had prepared the articles beforehand. Negotiations were opened on the morning of the 7th of September, and by noon Gen. Amherst had returned the French stipulations with his own conditions appended. The remainder of that day was consumed in correspondence, and the articles were signed on the following day.

¹ The Marquis de Vaudreuil protested against the severity of these terms, but in vain. The Chevalier de Levis, who commanded the French troops, absolutely refused to submit to them, until ordered to do so by the Governor. An English version of the Chevalier's protest and the Governor's order is given in the New York "Documents" (Vol. X, p. 1106). The order is brief enough to be quoted:

"Whereas the interest of the colony does not permit us to reject the conditions proposed by the English general, which are favorable to a country whose lot is confided to me, I order Chevallier de Levis to conform himself to the said capitulation, and to make the troops lay down their arms."

VAUDREUIL.

Montreal, 8th September, 1760.

De Levis sent to Gen. Amherst a spirited remonstrance on his own account, as a soldier to a soldier, but his messenger was silenced and told by Amherst "that he was fully resolved, for the infamous part the troops of France had acted in exciting the savages to perpetrate the most horrid and unheard of barbarities in the whole progress of the war, and for other open treacheries, as well as flagrant breaches of faith, to manifest to all the world, by this capitulation, his detestation of such ungenerous practices, and disapprobation of their conduct," (Knox's "Historical Journal," Vol. II, p. 418).

In a letter sent to Marshal de Belle Isle after he landed in France, De Levis asserted that the regular troops "merited more attention from the Marquis de Vaudreuil and more esteem from Gen. Amherst, and added that his protest against what he considered harsh terms had prevented an exchange of the civilities "usual on such meeting between generals." New York "Documents" (Vol. X, p. 1123).

⁸ This name appears in Knox's "Historical Journal," in the "Annual Register," and in the New York "Documents," as "Moraigans." The Marquis de Vaudreuil in a despatch, of which a translation is given in the New York "Documents," (Vol. II, p. 579), twice spells the name "Moraingans." Who these Moraigans or Moraigans were cannot now be indisputably ascertained. The weight of authority seems to favor the view that they were the Mohicans. Knox ("Historical Journal," Vol. II. p. 400), mentions the "Mohians" in the list of tribes which were represented in Johnson's army, and Colden in his "History of the Five Nation Indians" states that the French name "Mourigan" is the equivalent of the English name "Mahikander," which was given to a tribe on the Hudson River, below Albany. That Knox's "Mohians" and Colden's "Mahikanders" were the Indians commonly called "Mohicans" is probable, as is also the identity of Colden's "Mourigan," with Vaudreuil's "Moraigans" and "Moraingans." Colden wrote his history while he was surveyor-general of the Province of New York, and it was published just ten years before the capitulation of Montreal.

⁹ In the "Statutes of Lower Canada," 'Commissaires des guerre.' That there was only one "Commissary of War" appears from the versions given in Knox's "Historical Journal" and the New York "Documents." De Levis in his letter to Marshal de Belle Isle (see note 2) gives his name and title "Commissary Bernier."

¹⁰ "Mon dit Sieur."

²¹ In 1663 Louis XIV. constituted as the governing body of New France "Le Conseil Souverain," with powers similar to those of the Parliament of Paris. The title of this body was in 1703 changed to "Le Conseil Supérieur." For a learned discussion of the nature of this council, see the "Introduction" by P. J. O. Chauveau, prefixed to the collection of "Jugements et Deliberations du Conseil Souverain de la Nouvelle France," published in 1885 under the auspices of the Legislature of Quebec.

III. EXTRACTS FROM THE TREATY OF PARIS, 1763.†

The Definitive Treaty of Peace and Friendship, between his Britannic Majesty, the Most Christian King, and the King of Spain; concluded at Paris, the 10th day of February, 1763. To which the King of Portugal acceded on the same day.

I. There shall be a Christian, universal, and perpetual peace, as well by sea as by land, and a sincere and constant friendship shall be re-established between their Britannic, Most Christian, Catholic, and Most Faithful Majesties.² * * *

II. The treaties³ of Westphalia of 1648; those of Madrid, between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain, of 1667 and 1670; the treaties of peace of Nimeguen of 1678 and 1679; of Ryswick of 1697; those of peace and of commerce of Utrecht of 1713; that of Baden of 1714; the treaty of the triple alliance of the Hague of 1717; that of the quadruple alliance of London of 1718; the treaty of peace of Vienna of 1738; the definitive treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle of 1748; and that of Madrid, between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain of 1750; as well as the treaties between the Crowns of Spain and Portugal, of the 13th of February, 1668, of the 6th of February, 1715, and of the 12th of February, 1761; and that of the 19th of April, 1713, between France and Portugal, with the guaranties of Great Britain: serve as a basis and foundation to the peace, and to the present treaty: and for this purpose they are all renewed and confirmed in the best form, as well as all the treaties in general, which subsisted between the high contracting parties before the war, as if they were inserted here word for word, so that they are to be exactly observed, for the future, in their whole tenor, and religiously executed on all sides, in all their points which shall not be derogated from by the present treaty, notwithstanding all that may have been stipulated to the contrary by any of the high contracting parties; and all the said parties declare, that they will not suffer any privilege, favour, or indulgence to subsist, contrary to the treaties above confirmed, except what shall have been agreed and stipulated by the present treaty.

IV. His Most Christian Majesty renounces all pretensions which he has heretofore formed, or might form, to Nova Scotia or Acadia, in all its parts,⁴ and guaranties the whole of it, with all its dependencies, to the King of Great Britain: moreover, his Most Christian Majesty cedes and guaranties to his said Britannic Majesty, in full right, Canada with all its dependencies, as well as the Island of Cape Breton,⁵ and all the other islands and coasts in the gulph and river St. Lawrence, and, in general, everything that depends on the said countries, lands, islands and coasts, with the sovereignty, property, possession, and all rights acquired by treaty or otherwise, which the Most Christian King and the Crown of France have had till now over the said countries, islands, places, coasts and their inhabitants, so that the Most Christian King cedes and makes over to the said King and to the Crown of Great Britain, and that in the most ample manner and form, without restriction and without any liberty to depart from the said cession and guaranty, under any pretence, or to disturb Great Britain in the possessions above-mentioned. His Britannic Majesty on his side agrees to grant the liberty of the Catholic religion to the inhabitants of Canada: he will consequently give the most precise and most effectual orders, that his new Roman Catholic subjects may profess the worship of their religion, according to the rites of the Romish Church, as far as the laws of Great Britain permit.⁶ His Britannic Majesty further agrees, that the French inhabitants, or others who had been subjects of the Most Christian King in Canada, may retire with all safety and freedom wherever they shall think proper, and may sell their estates, provided it be to subjects of his Britannic Majesty, and bring away their effects, as well as their persons, without being restrained in their emigration, under any pretence whatsoever except that of debts or of criminal prosecutions: the term limited for this emigration shall be fixed to the space of eighteen months, to be computed from the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty.

V. The subjects of France shall have the liberty of fishing and drying, on a part of the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland, such as it is specified in the XIIIth article of the Treaty of Utrecht; which article is renewed and confirmed by the present treaty, except what relates to the island of Cape Breton, as well as to the other islands and coasts in the mouth and in the gulph of St. Lawrence: and his Britannic Majesty consents to leave to the subjects of the Most Christian King the liberty of fishing in the gulph of St. Lawrence, on condition that the subjects of France do not exercise the said fishery but at the distance of three leagues from all the coasts belonging to Great Britain, as well those of the continent as those of the islands situated in the said gulph of St. Lawrence. And as to what relates to the fishery on the coasts of the island of Cape Breton out of the said gulph, the subjects of the Most Christian King shall not be permitted to exercise the said fishery but at the distance of fifteen leagues from the coasts of the island of Cape Breton; and the fishery on the coast of Nova Scotia or Acadia, and everywhere else out of the said gulph, shall remain on the foot of former treaties.⁷

VI. The King of Great Britain cedes the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon in full right to his Most Christian Majesty, to serve as a shelter to the French fishermen: and his said Most Christian Majesty engages not to fortify the said islands; to erect no buildings upon them, but merely for the convenience of the fishery; and to keep upon them a guard of fifty men only for the police.

VII. In order to re-establish peace on solid and durable foundations, and to remove for ever all subject of dispute with regard to the limits of the British and French territories on the continent of America, it is agreed that for the future the confines between the dominions of his Britannic Majesty, and those of his Most Christian Majesty, in that part of the world, shall be fixed irrevocably by a line drawn along the middle of the river Mississippi, from its source^a to the river Iberville, and from thence, by a line drawn along the middle of this river, and the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain, to the sea; and for this purpose, the Most Christian King cedes in full right, and guaranties to his Britannic Majesty, the river and port of the Mobile, and everything which he possesses, or ought to possess, on the left side of the river Mississippi, except the town of New Orleans, and the island in which it is situated, which shall remain to France; provided that the navigation of the river Mississippi shall be equally free, as well to the subjects of Great Britain as to those of France, in its whole breadth and length, from its source to the sea, and expressly that part which is between the said island of New Orleans and the right bank of that river, as well as the passage both in and out of its mouth. It is further stipulated, that the vessels belonging to the subjects of either nation shall not be stopped, visited, or subjected to the payment of any duty whatsoever. The stipulations inserted in the IVth article in favor of the inhabitants of Canada shall also take place with regard to the inhabitants of the countries ceded by this article.

VIII. The King of Great Britain shall return to France the islands of Guadeloupe, of Marie Galante, of Desirade, of Martinico, and of Belle-isle; and the fortresses of these islands shall be restored in the same condition they were in when they were conquered by the British arms; provided that his Britannic Majesty's subjects, who shall have settled in the said islands, or those who shall have any commercial affairs to settle there, or in the other places restored to France by the present treaty, shall have liberty to sell their lands and their estates, to settle their affairs, to recover their debts, and to bring away their effects, as well as their persons, on board vessels which they shall be permitted to send to the said islands and other places restored as above, and which shall serve for this use only, without being restrained on account of their religion, or under any other pretence whatsoever, except that of debts or of criminal prosecutions: * * * with the same stipulations in favor of the inhabitants of this colony inserted in the IVth article for those of Canada : and the partition of the islands called Neutral is agreed and fixed, so that those of St. Vincent, Dominica, and Tobago shall remain in full right to Great Britain, and that of St. Lucia shall be delivered to France, to enjoy the same likewise in full right; and the high contracting parties guaranty the partition so stipulated.

IX. The Most Christian King cedes and guaranties to his Britannic Majesty, in full right, the islands of Grenada,^o and of the Grenadines.

XVII. His Britannic Majesty shall cause to be demolished all the fortifications which his subjects shall have erected in the Bay of Honduras, and other places of the territory of Spain in that part of the world, four months after the ratification of the present treaty; and his Catholic Majesty shall not permit his Britannic Majesty's subjects, or their workmen, to be disturbed or molested, under any pretence whatsoever in the said places in their occupation of cutting, loading, and carrying away logwood; and for this purpose they may build without hindrance and occupy without interruption the houses and magazines which are necessary for them, for their families, and for their effects; and his Catholic Majesty assures to them by this article, the full enjoyment of those advantages and powers on the Spanish coasts and territories, as above stipulated, immediately after the ratification of the present treaty.

XVIII. His Catholic Majesty desists, as well for himself as for his successors, from all pretension which he may have formed in favor of the Guipuscoans and other his subjects, to the right of fishing in the neighbourhood of the island of Newfoundland.

XIX. The King of Great Britain shall restore to Spain all the territory which he has conquered in the island of Cuba, with the fortress of the Havana, and this fortress, as well as all the other fortresses of the said island, shall be restored in the same condition they were in when conquered by his Britannic Majesty's arms; provided that his Britannic Majesty's subjects, who shall have settled in the said island, restored to Spain by the present treaty, or those who shall have any commercial affairs to settle there, shall have liberty to sell their lands and their estates, to settle their affairs, to recover their debts, and to bring away their effects as well as their persons on board vessels which they shall be permitted to send to the said island restored as above, and which shall serve for that use only, without being restrained on account of their religion, or under any pretence whatsoever, except that of debts or of criminal prosecutions; * * * *

XX. In consequence of the restitution stipulated in the preceding article, his Catholic Majesty cedes and guaranties, in full right, to his Britannic Majesty, Florida with Fort St. Augustin and the Bay of Pensacola, as well as all that Spain possesses on the continent of North America to the east or to the south-east of the river Mississippi; and, in general, everything that depends on the said countries and lands, with the sovereignty, property, possession, and all rights, acquired by treaties or otherwise, which the Catholic King and the Crown of Spain have had, till now, over the said countries, lands, places, and their inhabitants; so that the Catholic King cedes and makes over the whole to the said King, and to the Crown of Great Britain, and that in the most ample manner and form. His Britannic Majesty agrees, on his side, to grant to the inhabitants of the countries above ceded the liberty of the Catholic religion; he will consequently give the most express and the most effectual orders, that his new Roman Catholic subjects may profess the worship of their religion, according to the rites of the Romish church, as far as the laws of Great Britain permit: His Britannic Majesty further agrees that the Spanish inhabitants or others, who had been subjects of the Catholic King in the said countries, may retire with all safety and freedom whenever they think proper; and may sell their estates, provided it be to His Britannic Majesty's subjects, and bring away their effects as well as their persons, without being restrained in their emigration under any pretence whatsoever except that of debts or of criminal prosecutions: * * * * *

XXII. All the papers, letters, documents, and archives, which were found in the countries, territories, towns, and places that are restored, and those belonging to the countries ceded, shall be respectively and bona fide delivered or furnished at the same time, if possible, that possession is taken, or at latest four months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, in whatever places the said papers or documents may be found.¹⁰

NOTES TO THE TREATY OF PARIS, 1763.

¹ The extracts selected contain all that is essential from a Canadian point of view in the treaty. The text is reprinted from the "Collection of Treaties between Great Britain and other Powers," published in London in 1790, by George Chalmers, who states that this Treaty of Paris "is printed from the copy which was published by authority in 1763." Three "separate articles," having "the same force as if they were inserted in the treaty," are appended to it. The second of these is as follows: "It has been agreed and determined that the French language, made use of in all the copies of the present treaty, shall not become an example which may be alledged or made a precedent of, or prejudice in any manner any of the contracting Powers; and that they shall conform themselves for the future to what has been observed, and ought to be observed, with regard to and on the part of Powers who are used, and have a right, to give and to receive copies of like treaties in another language than French; the present treaty having still the same force and effect as if the aforesaid custom had been therein observed."

² The titles by courtesy of George III. of Great Britain, Louis XV. of France, Charles III. of Spain, and Joseph Emanuel of Portugal, respectively. The first of the "separate articles," referred to in Note 1, provides that "some of the titles made use of by the contracting Powers * * * not being generally acknowledged, it has been agreed that no prejudice shall ever result therefrom to any of the said contracting parties, and that the titles taken or omitted on either side * * * shall not be cited or quoted as a precedent."

IV. ROYAL PROCLAMATION¹ UNDER THE TREATY OF PARIS, 1763.

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS we have taken into our Royal consideration the extensive and valuable acquisitions in America, secured to our Crown by the late definitive treaty of peace concluded at Paris the tenth day of February last; and being desirous that all our loving subjects, as well of our kingdoms as of our colonies in America, may avail themselves with all convenient speed of the great benefits and advantages which must accrue therefrom to their commerce, manufactures, and navigation; we have thought fit, with the advice of our Privy Council, to issue this our Royal Proclamation, hereby to publish and declare to all our loving subjects, that we have, with the advice of our said Privy Council, granted our letters patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, to erect within the countries and islands ceded and confirmed to us by the said treaty, four distinct and separate governments, stiled and called by the names of QUEBEC, EAST FLORIDA, WEST FLORIDA, and GRENADA, and limited and bounded as follows, viz :

Firstly. The Government of QUEBEC, bounded² on the Labrador Coast by the River St. John, and from thence by a line drawn from the head of that river, through the Lake St. John, to the south end of the Lake Nipissim; from whence the said line, crossing the River St. Lawrence, and the Lake Champlain in forty-five degrees of north latitude, passes along the high lands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the said River St. Lawrence, from those which fall into the sea; and also along the north coast of the Baye des Chaleurs, and the coast of the Gulph of St. Lawrence to Cape Rosieres, and from thence crossing the mouth of the River St. Lawrence by the west end of the Island of Anticosti, terminates at the aforesaid River St. John.

Secondly. The Government of EAST FLORIDA, bounded to the westward by the Gulph of Mexico and the Apalachicola River; to the northward, by a line drawn from that part of the said river where the Catahouchee and Flint Rivers meet, to the source of the St. Mary's River, and by the course of the said river to the Atlantic Ocean; and to the east and south by the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulph of Florida, including all the islands within six leagues of the sea coast.

Thirdly. The Government of WEST FLORIDA, bounded to the southward by the Gulph of Mexico, including all islands within six leagues of the coast from the River Apalachicola to Lake Pontchartrain; to the westward, by the said lake, the Lake Maurepas, and the River Mississippi; to the northward, by a line drawn east from that part of the River Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees north latitude, to the River Apalachicola, or Catahouchee; and to the eastward by the said river.

Fourthly. The Government of GRENADA,³ comprehending the island of that name, together with the Grenadines, and the islands of Dominico, St. Vincent and Tobago.

And to the end that the open and free fishing of our subjects may be extended to and carried on upon the coast of Labrador, and the adjacent islands, we have thought fit, with the advice of our said Privy Council, to put all that coast, from the River St. John's to Hudson's Straights, together with the islands of Anticosti and the Magdeleine, and all smaller islands lying upon the said coast, under the care and inspection of our Governor of Newfoundland.⁴

We have also, with the advice of our Privy Council, thought fit to annex the islands of St. John and Cape Breton, or Isle Royale, with the lesser islands adjacent thereto, to our Government of Nova Scotia.⁵

We have also, with the advice of our Privy Council aforesaid, annexed to our Province of Georgia, all the lands lying between the rivers Attamaha and St. Mary's.

And whereas it will greatly contribute to the speedy settling our said New Governments, that our loving subjects should be informed of our paternal care for the security of the liberty and properties of those who are, and shall become, inhabitants thereof; we have thought fit to publish and declare, by this our Proclamation, that we have in the letters patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, by which the said Governments are constituted, given express power and direction to our governors of our said colonies respectively, that so soon as the state and circumstances of the said colonies will admit thereof, they shall, with the advice and consent of the members of our Council, summon and call general assemblies⁶ within the said governments respectively, in such manner and form as is used and directed in those colonies and provinces⁷ in America, which are under our immediate government; and we have also given power to the said governors, with the consent of our said councils and the representatives of the people so to be summoned as aforesaid, to make, constitute, and ordain laws, statutes, and ordinances for the public peace, welfare, and good government of our said colonies, and of the people and inhabitants thereof, as near as may be, agreeable to the laws of England, and under such regulations and restrictions as are used in other colonies, and in the meantime, and until such assemblies can be called as aforesaid, all persons inhabiting in or resorting to our said colonies may confide in our Royal protection for the enjoyment of the benefit of the laws of our realm of England: for which purpose we have given power under our great seal to the governors of our said colonies respectively to enact and constitute, with the advice of our said councils respectively, courts of judicature and public justice within our said colonies for the hearing and determining all causes as well criminal as civil according to law and equity, and, as near as may be, agreeable to the laws of England, with liberty to all persons who may think themselves aggrieved by the sentence of such courts in all civil cases to appeal under the usual limitations and restrictions to us in our Privy Council.

We have also thought fit, with the advice of our Privy Council as aforesaid, to give unto the governors and councils of our said three new colonies upon the continent full power and authority to settle and agree with the inhabitants of our said new colonies, or any other person who shall resort thereto, for such lands, tenements and hereditaments as are now or hereafter shall be in our power to dispose of, and them to grant to any such person or persons, upon such terms and under such moderate quit rents, services, and acknowledgments as have been appointed and settled in other colonies, and under such other conditions as shall appear to us to be necessary and expedient for the advantage of the grantees and the improvement and settlement of our said colonies.

And whereas we are desirous upon all occasions to testify our Royal sense and approbation of the conduct and bravery of the officers and soldiers of our armies, and to reward the same. We do hereby command and empower our governors of our said three new colonies, and other our governors of our several Provinces on the continent of North America, to grant without fee or reward to such reduced officers as have served in North America during the late war, and are actually residing there, and shall personally apply for the same, the following quantities of land, subject at the expiration of ten years to the same quit rents as other lands are subject to in the Province within which they are granted, as also subject to the same conditions of cultivation and improvement, viz :

To every person having the rank of a field officer	5,000 acres.
To every captain	3,000 acres.
To every subaltern or staff officer	2,000 acres.
To every non-commissioned officer	200 acres.
To every private man	50 acres.

We do likewise authorize and require the Governors and Commanders-in-Chief of all our said Colonies upon the Continent of North America, to grant the like quantities of land and upon the same conditions to such reduced officers of our navy of like rank as served on board our ships of war in North America, at the times of the reduction of Louisburg and Quebec in the late war, and who shall personally apply to our respective Governors for such grants.

And whereas it is just and reasonable, and essential to our interest and the security of our colonies, that the several nations or tribes of Indians¹⁰ with whom we are connected, and who live under our protection, should not be molested or disturbed in the possession of such parts of our dominions and territories as, not having been ceded to us, are reserved to them, or any of them, as their hunting-grounds; we do therefore, with the advice of our Privy Council, declare it to be our Royal will and pleasure that no Governor or Commander-in-Chief in any of our colonies of QUEBEC, EAST FLORIDA, or WEST FLORIDA, do presume upon any pretence whatever to grant warrants of survey, or pass any patents for lands beyond the bounds of their respective governments as described in their commissions: as also that no Governor or Commander-in-Chief of our other colonies or plantations in America do presume for the present, and until our further pleasure be known, to grant warrants of survey, or pass any patents for lands beyond the heads or sources of any of the rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean from the west or northwest; or upon any lands whatever which, not having been ceded to or purchased by us, as aforesaid, are reserved to the said Indians or any of them.

And we do further declare it to be our Royal will and pleasure, for the present as aforesaid, to reserve under our sovereignty, protection, and dominion, for the use of the said Indians, all the land and territories not included within the limits of our said three new governments, or within the limits of the territory granted to the Hudson's Bay Company; as also the land and territories lying to the westward of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the west and northwest as aforesaid; and we do hereby strictly forbid, on pain of our displeasure, all our loving subjects from making any purchases or settlements whatever, or taking possession of any of the lands above reserved, without our special leave and licence for that purpose first obtained.

And we do further strictly enjoin and require all persons whatsoever, who have either wilfully or inadvertently seated themselves upon any lands within the countries above described, or upon any other lands which, not having been ceded to or purchased by us, are still reserved to the said Indians as aforesaid, forthwith to remove themselves from such settlements.

And whereas great frauds and abuses have been committed in the purchasing lands of the Indians, to the great prejudice of our interests and to the great dissatisfaction of the said Indians; in order, therefore, to prevent such irregularities for the future, and to the end that the Indians may be convinced of our justice and determined resolution to remove all reasonable cause of discontent, we do, with the advice of our Privy Council, strictly enjoin and require that no private person do presume to make any purchase from the said Indians of any lands reserved to the said Indians within those parts of our colonies where we have thought proper to allow settlement; but that, if at any time any of the said Indians should be inclined to dispose of the said lands, the same shall be purchased only for us, in our name, at some public meeting or assembly of the said Indians, to be held for that purpose by the Governor or Commander-in-Chief of our colony respectively, within which they shall lie: and, in case they shall be within the limits of any proprietaries,¹¹ conformable to such directions and instructions as we or they shall think proper to give for that purpose: and we do, by the advice of our Privy Council, declare and enjoin that the trade of the said Indians shall be free and open to all our subjects whatever, provided that every person who may incline to trade with the said Indians, do take out a licence for carrying on such trade, from the Governor or Commander-in-Chief of any of our colonies respectively, where such person shall reside, and also give security to observe such regulations as we shall at any time think fit, by ourselves or commissaries to be appointed for this purpose, to direct and appoint for the benefit of the said trade; and we do hereby authorize, enjoin and require the Governors and Commanders-in-Chief of all our colonies respectively, as well those under our immediate government as those under the government and direction of proprietaries, to grant such licenses without fee or reward, taking special care to insert therein a condition that such licence shall be void, and the security forfeited, in case the person to whom the same is granted shall refuse or neglect to observe such regulations as we shall think proper to prescribe, as aforesaid.

And we do further expressly enjoin and require all officers whatever, as well military as those employed in the management and direction of Indian affairs within the territories reserved as aforesaid for the use of the said Indians, to seize and apprehend all persons whatever who, standing charged with treason, misprision of treason, murder, or other felonies or misdemeanors, shall fly from justice and take refuge in the said territory, and to send them under a proper guard to the colony where the crime was committed, of which they shall stand accused, in order to take their trial for the same.

Given at our Court, at St. James's, the seventh day of October, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three, in the third year of our Reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

NOTES TO THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION, 1763.

¹ By the judgment of Lord Chief Justice Mansfield in the case of Campbell v. Hall, which has never been reversed by or questioned in a court of law, this Proclamation is declared to have been the Imperial Constitution of Canada during the years 1763-1774. In the latter year it was superseded by the Quebec Act. The text is reprinted from the "Annual Register" for 1763, a contemporary authority, but it has been compared with other reprints.

² Compare the boundaries of Quebec as given in the Quebec Act, 1774, as modified by the Treaty of Paris, 1763, and as authoritatively declared for the western and northern limits of the former Province of Quebec by the Imperial Act of 1889, to declare the boundaries of the Province of Ontario in the Dominion of Canada (52 and 53 Vict. Chap. 28).

³ See Lord Chief Justice Mansfield's judgment in Campbell v. Hall, for a statement of the facts connected with the establishment of British Government in Grenada.

⁴ Compare the Quebec Act, 1774, and the Constitutional Act, 1791. For the treaty stipulations with France respecting the fisheries see the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713, the Treaty of Paris, 1763, and the Treaty of Versailles, 1763.

⁷ See Note 15 to "Representative Assemblies in the Maritime Provinces."

¹⁰ The nature of the Indian title to lands occupied by nomad tribes has from very early times in America, been a subject of both political and legal importance. For all British Colonies all controversy on the question has been finally set at rest by the judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the well-known case, "St. Catherine's Milling and Lumber Company v. The Queen." The judgment in that case (Appeal Cases, Vol. XIV., pp. 46-61) was delivered by Lord Watson, according to whom the terms of this Proclamation "shew that the tenure of the Indians was a personal and usufructuary right, dependent on the good will of the Sovereign," and "the Crown has all along had a present proprietary estate in the land, upon which the Indian title was a mere burden." The theory on which the British colonists in America acted is lucidly stated in a formal opinion given jointly by several colonial authorities, and printed in the "Documents relating to the Colonial History of the State of New York," Vol. XIII., p. 486: "Tho' it hath been and still is the usual practice of all Proprietors to give their Indians some recompence for their land, and seem to purchase it of them, yet that is not done for want of sufficient title from the King or Prince who hath the right of discovery, but out of prudence and Christian charity, least otherwise the Indians might have destroyed the first planters (who are usually too few to defend themselves) or refuse all commerce and conversation with the planters, and thereby all hopes of converting them to the Christian faith would be lost." The judgment of the Privy Council above cited was given on an appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada in the same case (Supreme Court Reports, Vol. XIII., p. 577), dismissing an appeal from the Ontario Court of Appeal (Appeal Reports, Vol. XIII., pp. 148-173), and the judgment of the latter Court dismissed the appeal from the original judgment of Chancellor Boyd, who held that, "the claim of the Indians by virtue of their original occupation is not such as to give any title to the land itself, but only serves to commend them to the consideration and liberality of the Government upon their displacement," and that "the surrender to the Crown by the Indians of any territory adds nothing in law to the strength of the title paramount," (Ontario Reports, Vol. X., p. 234). The various judgments in the Canadian Courts contain very full discussions of the whole question in its historical aspects.

COMMISSION¹ OF GOVERNOR MURRAY, 1763.

George the Third, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, to our trusty and well-beloved JAMES MURRAY,² Esquire, Greeting :

We, reposing especial trust and confidence in the prudence, courage, and loyalty of you, the said James Murray, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to constitute and appoint, and by these premises do constitute and appoint you, the said James Murray, to be our Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over our province of Quebec³ in America; bounded on the Labrador Coast by the river St. John; and from thence by a line drawn from the head of that river through the lake St. John to the south end of the lake Nipissim, from whence the said line crossing the river St. Lawrence and the lake Champlain, in forty-five degrees of northern latitude, passes along the high lands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the said river St. Lawrence from those which fall into the sea; and also along the north coast of the Baye des Chaleurs and the coast of the gulf of St. Lawrence to Cape Rosieres; and from thence crossing the mouth of the river St. Lawrence by the west end of the island of Anticosti, terminates at the aforesaid river St. John; together with all the rights, members, and appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging.

And we do hereby require and command you to do and execute all things in due manner that shall belong to your said command and the trust we have reposed in you, according to the several powers and directions granted or appointed you by this present commission and the instructions and authorities herewith given unto you, or by such other powers, instructions, and authorities as shall at any time hereafter be granted or appointed under our signet and sign manual, or by our order in our privy Council, and according to such reasonable laws and statutes as shall hereafter be made and agreed upon by you with the advice and consent of the council and assembly of our said province under your government, in such manner and form as is herein after expressed.

* * * * *

And we do hereby give and grant unto you, the said James Murray, full power and authority, with the advice and consent of our said council to be appointed as aforesaid, so soon as the situation and circumstances of our said province under your government will admit thereof, and when and as often as need shall require, to summon and call general assemblies⁴ of the freeholders and planters within your government, in such manner as you in your discretion shall judge most proper; or according to such further powers, instructions and authorities as shall be at any time hereafter granted or appointed you under our signet or sign manual or by our order in our privy Council.

And our will and pleasure is that the persons thereupon duly elected by the major part of the freeholders of the respective parishes or precincts, and so returned, shall, before their sitting, take the oaths mentioned in the said act, intituled "An Act for the further security of his Majesty's person and government, and the succession of the Crown in the heirs of the late Princess Sophia, being Protestants, and for extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales, and his open and secret abettors;" as also make and subscribe the fore-mentioned declaration; which oaths and declaration you shall commissionate fit persons under the public seal of that our province to tender and administer unto them; and, until the same shall be so taken and subscribed, no person shall be capable of sitting, though elected.

And we do hereby declare that the persons so elected and qualified shall be called "The Assembly of that our Province of Quebec"; and that you, the said James Murray, by and with the advice and consent of our said Council and Assembly, or the major part of them, shall have full power and authority to make, constitute and ordain laws, statutes, and ordinances for the public peace, welfare, and good government of our said province, and of the people and inhabitants thereof, and such others as shall resort thereunto, and for the benefit of us, our heirs, and successors; which said laws, statutes, and ordinances are not to be repugnant, but as near as may be agreeable to the laws and statutes of this our kingdom of Great Britain.

* * * * *

And we do by these presents give and grant unto you, the said James Murray, full power and authority, with the advice and consent of our said Council, to erect, constitute, and establish such and so many courts of judicature and public justice^s within our said province under your government as you and they shall think fit and necessary, for the hearing and determining of all causes, as well criminal as civil, according to law and equity, and for awarding execution thereupon, with all reasonable and necessary powers, authorities, fees, and privileges belonging thereto.

* * * * *

And we do hereby grant unto you full power and authority to constitute and appoint judges, and, in cases requisite, commissioners of oyer and terminer, justices of the peace, and other necessary officers and ministers^s in our said province for the better administration of justice and putting the laws in execution; and to administer, or cause to be administered, unto them such oath or oaths as are usually given for the due execution and performance of offices and places, and for clearing the truth in judicial causes.

And we do hereby give and grant unto you full power and authority when you shall see cause, or shall judge any offender or offenders in criminal matters, or for any fines or forfeitures due unto us, fit objects of our mercy, to pardon all such offenders and remit all such offences, fines and forfeitures, treason and wilful murder only excepted; in which cases you shall likewise have power upon extraordinary occasions to grant reprieves to the offenders until, and to the intent that, our royal pleasure may be known therein.

And we do by these presents give and grant unto you full power and authority to collate⁷ any person or persons to any churches, chapels, or other ecclesiastical benefices within our said province, as often as any of them shall happen to be void.

* * * *

And we do hereby require and command all officers and ministers, civil and military, and all other inhabitants of our said province, to be obedient, aiding and assisting unto you, the said James Murray, in the execution of this our commission and of the powers and authorities therein contained; and in case of your death or absence from our said province and government, to be obedient, aiding and assisting to the commander in chief for the time being; to whom we do therefore by these presents give and grant all and singular the powers and authorities herein granted, to be by him executed and enjoyed during our pleasure, or until your arrival within our said province.

And in case of your death or absence from our said province our will and pleasure is that our lieutenant governour of Montreal or Trois Rivières, according to the priority of their commissions of lieutenant governours, do execute our said commission with all the powers and authorities therein mentioned as aforesaid. And in case of the death or absence of our lieutenant governours of Montreal and Trois Rivières from our said province, and that there shall be no person within our said province appointed by us to be lieutenant governour or commander in chief of our said province, our will and pleasure is that the eldest councillor, who shall be at the time of your death or absence residing within our said province, shall take upon him the administration of the government, and execute our said commission and instructions, and the several powers and authorities therein contained, in the same manner to all intents and purposes as other our governour or commander in chief should or ought to do, in case of your absence, or until your return, or in all cases until our further pleasure be known.

And we do hereby declare, ordain, and appoint that you, the said James Murray, shall and may hold, execute, and enjoy the office and place of our Captain General and Governour in Chief in and over our said Province of Quebec and all the territories depending thereon, with all and singular the powers and authorities hereby granted unto you, for and during our will and pleasure. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent.

Witnessa ourself at Westminster, the twenty-first day of November, in the fourth year of our reign.

By writ of Privy Seal.

(Signed) YORKE & YORKE.*

NOTES TO GOVERNOR MURRAY'S COMMISSION.

² Gen. Murray took part in the siege of Quebec in 1759, and was commandant of that city after its capture. In the summer of 1760 he ascended the St. Lawrence with an army to meet Gen. Amherst at Montreal. He was one of the British Generals who administered the country by military rule until this commission was issued to him as the first civil Governor after the capitulation. The other generals were Haldimand, who commanded at Three Rivers, and Gage who commanded at Montreal. Murray retired from Canada in 1767.

³ See the Royal Proclamation, 1763.

⁵ The assumption was that English law, both civil and criminal, had been introduced by the Royal Proclamation of 1763. For illustrations of the state of confusion which ensued in the administration of Justice see Smith's "History of Canada from its First Discovery to the year 1791," and especially the report, there given in full, of Crown Law Officers Yorke and DeGrey to the Lords of Trade and Plantations on certain memorials and petitions sent from both British and French residents in Quebec. See also Attorney-General Maseres' "Draught" of a report in 1769 on the same subject in the collection mentioned in Note 1 above. This draft was not acceptable to Governor Carleton, who favored the revival of "the whole body of the French laws that were in use there before the conquest with respect to civil matters." This policy of Governor Carleton's, in spite of the opposition of Maseres and of Chief Justice Hey, was afterwards embodied in the Quebec Act.

⁷ In 1768 George III. issued a mandate requiring the Governor to appoint three Church of England Clergymen as Rectors of the parish churches of Quebec, Montreal, and Three Rivers respectively. Maseres gives in his "Collection" the draft of a commission that was intended to be issued to the Rev. David Francis de Montmollin as Rector of the church of Quebec, adding that instead of commissions as Rectors, licenses to preach were afterwards substituted, on account of "the peculiar and delicate situation of the Province with respect to religion."

V. LORD MANSFIELD'S JUDGMENT¹ IN CAMPBELL v.
HALL, 1774.

The case of the Island of Grenada ; in relation to the payment of four and one-half in the hundred of goods imported therefrom ; between Alexander² Campbell, Esq., Plaintiff, and Wm. Hall, Esq., Defendant, in the Court of King's-Bench, before Lord Chief-Justice Mansfield : 15 George III., A. D. 1774.

*November 28.*³

The unanimous judgment of the Court was this day given by Lord Mansfield, as follows :

This is an action brought by the plaintiff, Alexander Campbell, who is a natural-born subject of Great Britain, and who, upon the third of May,⁴ 1763, purchased lands in the island of Grenada ; and it is brought against the defendant, William Hall, who was collector for His Majesty at the time of levying the import of a duty of four and a half per cent. upon goods exported from the island of Grenada. The action is to recover a sum of money, which was levied by the defendant and paid by the plaintiff, as this duty of four and a half per cent. upon sugars, which were exported from the island of Grenada, from the estate and by the consignment of the plaintiff.

The action is an action for money had and received ; and it is brought upon this ground, namely, that the money was paid to the defendant without consideration, the duty for which he received it not having been imposed by lawful or sufficient authority to warrant the same.

And it is stated in the special verdict⁵ that the money is not paid over, but continues in the defendant's hands, by consent of the Attorney-General, for His Majesty, in order that the question may be tried.

The special verdict states Grenada to have been conquered by the British arms from the French King in 1762 ; that the island was ceded by capitulation ; and that the capitulation upon which it surrendered was by reference to the capitulation upon which the island of Martinico had been surrendered on the 7th of February, 1762.

The special verdict then states some articles of that capitulation, particularly the fifth ; which grants that Martinico should continue to be governed by its own laws till His Majesty's pleasure be known. It next states the sixth article, where, to a demand of the inhabitants of Grenada requiring that they, as also the religious orders of both sexes, should be maintained in the property of their effects, moveable and immoveable, of what nature soever, and that they should be preserved in their privileges, rights, honours, and exemptions, the answer is that the inhabitants, being subjects of Great Britain, will enjoy their properties and the same privileges as in the other His Majesty's Leeward Islands.⁶

Then it states another article of the capitulation, namely, the 7th article, by which they demand that they shall pay no other duties than what they before paid to the French King; that the capitation tax shall be the same, and that the expenses of the courts of justice, and of the administration of government should be paid out of the King's demesne: in answer to which they are referred to the answer I have stated, as given in the foregoing article; that is, being subjects they will be entitled in like manner as the other His Majesty's subjects in the British Leeward Islands.

The next thing stated in the special verdict is the treaty of peace signed on the 10th of February, 1763; and it states that part of the treaty of peace by which the island of Grenada is ceded, and other articles not material.

The next and material instrument which they state is a proclamation under the Great Seal, bearing date the 7th of October, 1763, reciting thus:—

“Whereas it will greatly contribute to the settling of our said islands of which Grenada is one, that they be informed of our love and paternal care for the liberties and rights of those who are, or shall be inhabitants thereof; we have thought fit to publish and declare by this our proclamation, that we have by our letters patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, whereby our said Governments are constituted, given express power and direction to our governors of our said colonies respectively, that so soon as the state and circumstances of the said colonies will admit thereof, they shall, with the advice and consent of our said council, call and summon general assemblies,⁸ in such manner and form as is used in the other colonies under our immediate government. And we have also given power to the said governors, with the advice and consent of our said council and assembly of representatives as aforesaid, to make, constitute, and ordain laws, statutes, and ordinances for the public peace, welfare and good government of our said colonies and the inhabitants thereof, as near as may be agreeable to the laws of England, and under such regulations and restrictions as are used in our other colonies.”

Then follow letters patent under the Great Seal, or rather a proclamation of the 26th of March, 1764, whereby the King recites, that he had ordered a survey and division of the ceded islands, as an invitation to all purchasers to come and purchase upon certain terms and conditions specified in that proclamation.

The next instrument stated in the verdict is the letters patent bearing date the 9th of April, 1764. In these letters there is a commission^a appointing General Melville Governor of the island of Grenada, with power to summon an assembly as soon as the situation and circumstances of the island would admit; and to make laws in all the usual forms with reference to the manner of the other assemblies of the King's Provinces in America.

The Governor arrived in Grenada on the 14th of December, 1764; before the end of 1765, the particular day not stated, an assembly actually met; but before the arrival of the Governor at Grenada, indeed, before his departure from London, there is another instrument upon the validity of which the whole question turns, which instrument contains letters patent under the Great Seal, bearing date the 20th of July, 1764, and reciting that in Barbadoes, and in all the British Leeward islands, a duty of four and a half per cent. was paid upon goods exported; and reciting further:

"Whereas it is reasonable and expedient, and of importance to our other sugar islands, that the like duties should take place in our said island of Grenada; we have thought fit, and our royal will and pleasure is, and we do hereby, by virtue of our prerogative Royal, order, direct, and appoint that an import or custom of four and a half per cent. in specie, shall, from and after the 29th day of September next ensuing the date of these presents be raised and paid to us, our heirs and successors, for and upon all dead commodities of the growth or produce of our said island of Grenada that shall be shipped off from the same, in lieu of all customs and impost¹⁰ duties hitherto collected upon goods imported and exported into and out of the said island, under the authority of his Most Christian Majesty, and that the same shall be collected, &c."; then it goes on with reference to the island of Barbadoes, and the other Leeward islands.

The jury find that in fact such duty of four and a half per cent. is paid to his Majesty in all the British Leeward islands. And they find several Acts of Assembly which are relative to the several islands, and which I shall not state, as they are public, and every gentleman may have access to them.

These letters patent of the 20th of July, 1764, with what I stated in the opening, are all that is material in this special verdict.

Upon the whole of the case this general question arises, being the substance of what is submitted to the Court by the verdict: "Whether these letters patent of the 20th of July, 1764, are good and valid to abrogate the French duties, and in lieu thereof to impose this duty of four and a half per cent., which is paid by all the Leeward islands subject to his Majesty."

That the letters are void has been contended at the bar, upon two points: (1) That although they had been made before the Proclamation of the 7th of October, 1763, the King by his prerogative could not have imposed them; and (2) that, although the King had sufficient authority before the 7th of October, 1763, he had divested himself of that authority by the Proclamation of that date.

A great deal has been said, and authorities have been cited relative to propositions in which both sides exactly agree, or which are too clear to be denied. The stating of these will lead us to the solution of the first point.

I will state the propositions at large:

1 A country conquered by the British arms becomes a dominion of the King in the right of his crown, and therefore necessarily subject to the legislative power of the Parliament of Great Britain.

2. The conquered inhabitants once received into the conqueror's protection become subjects; and are universally to be considered in that light, not as enemies or aliens.

3. Articles of capitulation, upon which the country is surrendered, and treaties of peace by which it is ceded, are sacred and inviolate, according to their true intent and meaning.

4. The law and legislation of every dominion equally affects all persons and property within the limits thereof, and is the true rule for the decision of all questions which arise there. Whoever purchases, sues, or lives there, puts himself under the laws of the place, and in the situation of its inhabitants. An Englishman in Ireland, Minorca, the Isle of Man, or the Plantations, has no privilege distinct from the natives while he continues there.

5. The laws of a conquered country continue in force until they are altered by the conqueror. The justice and antiquity of this maxim are incontrovertible; and the absurd exception as to pagans mentioned in Calvin's case,¹¹ shows the universality and antiquity of the maxim. That exception could not exist before the Christian era, and in all probability arose from the mad enthusiasm of the Crusades. In the present case the capitulation expressly provides and agrees that they shall continue to be governed by their own laws, until his Majesty's pleasure be further known.

6. If the King has power (and, when I say "the King," I mean in this case "the King without the concurrence of Parliament") to alter the old and to make new laws for a conquered country—this being a power subordinate to his own authority as a part of the supreme legislature and parliament—he can make none which are contrary to fundamental principles; he cannot exempt an inhabitant from the laws of trade, or the authority of Parliament, or give him privileges exclusive of his other subjects; and so in many other instances that might be put.

The present Proclamation is an Act of this subordinate legislative power. If it had been made before the 7th of October, 1763, it would have been made on the most reasonable and equitable grounds, putting the island of Grenada as to duties on the same footing as the other islands.

If Grenada paid more duties, the injury would have been to her; if less, it must have been detrimental to the other islands; nay, it would have been carrying the capitulation into execution, which gave the people of Grenada hopes that if any new duties were laid on, their condition would be the same as that of the other Leeward islands.

The only question which remains on this first point then is, whether the King of himself had power to make such a change between the 10th of February, 1763, the day the treaty was signed, and the 7th of October,¹² 1763.

Taking the above propositions to be granted, he has a legislative power over a conquered country, limited to him by the constitution, and subordinate to the constitution and parliament. It is left by the constitution to the King's authority to grant or refuse a capitulation. If he refuses, and puts the inhabitants to the sword, or exterminates them, all the lands belong to him; and if he plants a colony, the new settlers share the land between them, subject to the prerogative of the conqueror. If he receives the inhabitants under his protection and grants them their property, he has power to fix such terms and conditions as he thinks proper. He is entrusted with making peace at his discretion; and he may retain the conquest, or yield it up, on such condition as he pleases. These powers no man ever disputed, neither has it hitherto been controverted that the King might change part or the whole of the law or political form of government of a conquered nation.

To go into the history of conquests made by the crown of England.

The alteration of the laws of Ireland has been much discussed by lawyers and writers of great fame at different periods of time; but no man ever said the change was made by the parliament of England; no man, unless perhaps Mr. Molyneux,¹³ ever said the King could not do it. The fact, in truth, after all the researches that have been made, comes out clearly to be as laid down by Lord Chief Justice Vaughan, that Ireland received the laws of England by the charters and commands of Henry II., King John, Henry III., and he adds an et cetera to take in Edward I., and the successors of the princes named. That the charter of 12 King John was by assent of a parliament of Ireland, he shows clearly to be a mistake. Whenever the first parliament was called in Ireland, that change in their constitution was without an act of the parliament of England, and therefore must have been derived from the King.

Mr. Barrington is well warranted in saying that the 12th of Edward I., called the "Statute of Wales," is certainly no more than a regulation made by the King as conqueror, for the government of the country, which, the preamble says, was then totally subdued; and, however for purposes of policy he might think fit to claim it as a fief appertaining to the realm of England, he could never think himself entitled to make laws without assent of parliament to bind the subjects of any part of the realm. Therefore as he did make laws for Wales without assent of parliament, the clear consequence¹⁴ is that he governed it as a conquest: which was his title in fact, and the feudal right was but a fiction.

Berwick, after the conquest of it, was governed by charters from the crown, till the reign of James I., without interposition of parliament.

Whatever changes were made in the laws of Gascony, Guyenne, and Calais must have been under the King's authority; if by act of parliament, that act would be extant, for they were conquered in the reign of King Edward III.; and all the acts from that reign to the present time are extant; and in some acts of parliament there are commercial regulations relative to each of the conquests which I have named; none making any change in their constitution and laws, and particularly with regard to Calais, which is alluded to as if its laws were considered as given by the Crown. Yet as to Calais, there was a great change made in the constitution: for the inhabitants were summoned by writ to send burgesses to the English parliament; and, as this was not by act of parliament, it must have been by the sole act of the King.

Besides the garrison there are inhabitants, property, and trade at Gibraltar; the King, ever since that conquest, has from time to time made orders and regulations suitable to the condition of those who live, trade, or enjoy property in a garrison town.

Mr. Attorney-General¹⁵ has alluded to a variety of instances, several within these twenty years, in which the King has exercised legislation over Minorca. In Minorca, it has appeared lately, there are and have been for years back a great many inhabitants of worth and a great trade carried on. If the King does it there as coming in the place of the King of Spain, because their old constitution continues (which by the by is another proof that the constitution of England does not necessarily follow a conquest by the King of England) the same argument applies here; for before the 7th of October, 1763, the constitution of Grenada continued, and the King stood in the place of their former sovereign.

After the conquest of New York, in which most of the old Dutch inhabitants remained, King Charles II. changed its constitution and political form of government, and granted it to the Duke of York, to hold from his crown under all the regulations contained in the letters patent.

It is not to be wondered that an adjudged case in point is not to be found; no dispute ever was started before upon the King's legislative right over a conquest ; it never was denied in a court of law or equity in Westminster-hall, never was questioned in parliament. Lord Coke's report of the arguments and resolutions of the judges in Calvin's case lays it down as clear (and that strange extra judicial opinion, as to a conquest from a pagan country, will not make reason not to be reason, and law not to be law as to the rest). The book says, that "if a King"—I omit the distinction between a Christian and an infidel kingdom, which as to this purpose is wholly groundless, and most deservedly exploded—"If a King comes to a kingdom by conquest, he may, at his pleasure, alter and change the laws of that kingdom ; but, until he doth make an alteration of those laws the ancient laws of that kingdom remain ; but if a King hath a kingdom by title of descent, then, seeing that by the laws of that kingdom he doth inherit the kingdom, he cannot change those laws of himself without consent of parliament." It is plain that he speaks of his own country where there is a parliament. Also, "if a King hath a kingdom by conquest, as King Henry the Second had Ireland, after King John had given to them, being under his obedience and subjection, the laws of England for the government of that country, no succeeding King could alter the same without parliament." Which is very just, and it necessarily includes that King John himself could not alter the grant of the laws of England.

Besides this, the authority of two great names has been cited, who took the proposition for granted. And though opinions of counsel, whether acting officially in a public charge or in private, are not properly authority on which to found a decision, yet I cite them ;—not to establish so clear a point, but to shew that when it has been matter of legal enquiry, the answer it has received, by gentlemen of eminent character and abilities in the profession, has been immediate and without hesitation, and conformable to these principles. In 1722, the assembly of Jamaica refusing the usual supplies, it was referred to Sir Philip Yorke, and Sir Clement Wearg,¹⁶ what was to be done if they should persist in this refusal. Their answer is—"If Jamaica was still to be considered as a conquered island, the King had a right to levy taxes upon the inhabitants ; but, if it was to be considered in the same light as the other colonies, no tax could be imposed upon the inhabitants, but by an assembly of the island, or by an act of parliament." The distinction in law between a conquered country and a colony they held to be clear and indisputable ; whether, as to the case before them of Jamaica, that island remained a conquest or was made a colony, they had not examined. I have, upon former occasions, traced the constitution of Jamaica as far as there are books or papers in the offices ; I cannot find that any Spaniard remained upon the island so late as the Restoration ; if any, they were very few. A gentleman to whom I put the question on one of the arguments in this cause, said he knew of no Spanish names¹⁷ among the white inhabitants of Jamaica; but there were amongst the negroes. The King, I mean Charles the Second, after the Restoration invited settlers by proclamation, promising them his protection. He made grants of land. He appointed at first a governor and council only; afterwards he granted a commission to the governor to call an assembly. The constitution of every province immediately under the King has arisen in the same manner; not by the grants, but by commissions, to call assemblies. And therefore, all the Spaniards having left the island, or having been killed or driven out of it, Jamaica from the first settling was an English colony, who under the authority of the King planted a vacant island, belonging to him in right of his crown; like the cases of the islands of St. Helena and St. John, mentioned by Mr. Attorney-General.

A maxim of constitutional law, as declared by all the judges in Calvin's case, and which two such men in modern times as Sir Philip Yorke and Sir Clement Wearg took for granted, will acquire some authority, even if there were anything which otherwise [made it doubtful; but on the contrary no book, no saying of a judge, no, not even an opinion of any counsel, public or private, has been cited; no instance is to be found in any period of our history where it was ever questioned.

The counsel for the plaintiff undoubtedly labored this point from a diffidence of what might be our opinion on the second question. But upon the second point, after full consideration, we¹⁸ are of opinion that before the letters patent of the 20th of July, 1764, the King had precluded himself from an exercise of the legislative authority which he had before by virtue of his prerogative over the island of Grenada.

The first and material instrument is the proclamation of the 7th of October, 1763. See what it is that the King there says, and with what view he says it; how and to what he engages himself and pledges his word: "Whereas it will greatly contribute to the speedy settling our said new governments, that our loving subjects should be informed of our paternal care for the security of the liberty and properties of those who are, and shall become, inhabitants thereof; we have thought fit to publish and declare by this our proclamation, that we have in the letters patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, by which the said governments are constituted, given express power and direction to our governors of our said colonies respectively, that, so soon as the state and circumstances of the said colonies will admit thereof, they shall, with the advice and consent of the members of our council, summon and call general assemblies" (and then follow the directions for that purpose.) And to what end? "To make, constitute, and ordain laws, statutes, and ordinances for the public peace, welfare, and good government of our said colonies," of which this of Grenada is one, "and of the people and inhabitants thereof, as near as may be agreeable to the laws of England." With what view is the promise given? To invite settlers; to invite subjects. Why? The reason is given. They may think their liberties and properties more secure when they have a legislative assembly than under a governor and council only. The governor and council depending on the King, he can recall them at pleasure, and give a new frame to the constitution; but not so of the other, which has a negative on those parts of the legislature which depend on the King. Therefore that assurance is given them for the security of their liberty and properties, and with a view to invite them to go and settle there after this proclamation that assured them of the constitution under which they were to live.

The next act is of the 26th of March, 1764, which, the constitution having been established by proclamation, invites further such as shall be disposed to come and purchase, to live under the constitution. It states certain terms and conditions on which the allotments were to be taken, established with a view to permanent colonization and the increase and cultivation of the new settlement. For further confirmation of all this, on the 9th of April, 1764, three months before the impost in question was imposed, there is an actual commission to Governor Melville, to call an assembly as soon as the state and circumstances of the island should admit.—You will observe in the proclamation there is no legislature reserved to be exercised by the King, or by the governor and council under his authority, or in any other method or manner, until the assembly should be called: the promise imports the contrary; for whatever construction is to be put upon it, (which perhaps it may be somewhat difficult to pursue through all the cases to which it may be applied) it apparently considers laws then in being in the island, and to be administered by courts of justice; not an interposition of legislative authority between the time of the promise and of calling the assembly. It does not appear from the special verdict when the first assembly was called; it must have been in about a year at farthest from the governor's arrival, for the jury find he arrived in December, 1764, and that an assembly was held about the latter end of the year 1765. So that there appears to have been nothing in the state and circumstances of the island to prevent calling an assembly.

We therefore think that, by the two proclamations and the commission to Governor Melville, the King had immediately and irrevocably granted to all who were or should become inhabitants, or who had or should have property, in the island of Grenada—in general to all whom it might concern—that the subordinate legislation over the island should be exercised by an assembly, with the consent of the governor and council, in like manner as in the other provinces under the King.

Therefore, though the right of the King to have levied taxes on a conquered country, subject to him in right of his crown, was good, and the duty reasonable, equitable, and expedient, and, according to the finding of the verdict, paid in Barbadoes and all the other Leeward islands; yet by the inadvertency of the King's servants in the order in which the several instruments passed the office (for the patent of the 20th of July, 1764, for raising the impost stated, should have been first), the order is inverted, and the last we think contrary to and a violation of the first, and therefore void. How proper soever the thing may be respecting the object of these letters patent of the 26th of July, 1764, it can only now be done, to use the words of Sir Philip Yorke and Sir Clement Wearg, "by the assembly of the island, or by an act of the Parliament of Great Britain."

The consequence is, judgment must be given for the plaintiff.¹⁹

NOTES TO LORD MANSFIELD'S JUDGMENT.

¹ This judgment is to be found in Cowper's "Reports of Cases adjudged in the Court of King's Bench;" in Lofft's "Reports," etc.; and in Vol. XX. of Howell's "Complete Collection of State Trials." Cowper gives the judgment only; Lofft gives the "special verdict" referred to in the judgment, and also a very full summary of the arguments of counsel before the King's Bench, which heard it argued three separate times with different counsel on each side on each occasion. The text given here is taken mainly from Lofft, whose report has been used in compiling the "State Trials," but there are in it many inaccuracies which a comparison with Cowper's text will expose. The judgment appears to have been an oral one, for Lofft explains in a note that he used a contemporary printed summary to correct errors and supply omissions in his own notes.

¹¹ Lord Chief Justice Coke gives an abstract of the Calvin case in the seventh book of his "Reports." A lucid and interesting account of it is given by Maseres in the "Canadian Freeholder," Vol. II., pp. 312-322. For the benefit of those who have not access to these works it may be stated that Calvin was an infant born in Scotland three years after James VI. of that country became James I. of England, and the question at issue in the case was whether, having been born after the union of the Crowns, he was an alien in England, as he undoubtedly would have been if he had been born before it. Lord Chancellor Ellesmere and twelve out of fourteen Judges decided that Calvin was not an alien, and Lord Coke in his judgment, in the course of a discussion of the nature of alienage, uttered the dictum quoted by Lord Mansfield respecting the legislative authority of the King over conquered countries. Maseres ingeniously contends that Lord Coke's dictum makes against, rather than for Lord Mansfield's opinion on this point.

¹⁸ The report in the "State Trials" has "we are all of opinion;" Maseres, in the the "Canadian Freeholder," (Vol. II., pp. 343-346), raises, but does not settle, the question whether Lord Mansfield's colleagues of the King's Bench concurred in the former part of his judgment, namely, that the King had a prerogative right to legislate for a conquered country until he lost that right either by surrendering it to the conquered people or by the legislative intervention of the British Parliament. The compiler of the "State Trials" (Vol. XX., p. 1389), gives the following statement, as an addendum to the text of the Report in the Grenada case: "Mr. Baron Maseres has told me he was informed by Mr. Justice Miller himself, that he did not concur in the doctrine which Lord Mansfield in the case of Campbell v. Hull, laid down respecting the right of the Crown to legislate antecedently to a renunciation of such right for a conquered colony." It is somewhat peculiar that Lord Mansfield here for the first time in his judgment associates his colleagues with himself in the finding of the Court.

¹⁹ For a full, learned, and interesting discussion of this judgment in all its aspects—historical, political, and legal—see Maseres' second dialogue in Vol. II. of the "Canadian Freeholder." See also "State Trials" (Vol. XX. p. 331), for the opinion of Sergeant Marshall on the view of the constitution given by Lord Mansfield. The second part of the judgment has always been regarded as an important charter of colonial liberties, all the more so because Lord Mansfield in Parliament, as well as on the Bench, was a thorough-going assertor of royal prerogative and of imperial sovereignty over the colonies. See his speech, made in the House of Lords on the 3rd of February, 1866, on the adoption of the motion declaring the right of Great Britain to tax her American colonies.

THE QUEBEC ACT, 1774, AND SUPPLEMENTARY ACTS.

An Act, for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America.

Preamble.

WHEREAS his Majesty, by his Royal Proclamation, bearing date the seventh day of October, in the third year of his reign, thought fit to declare the provisions which had been made in respect to certain countries, territories, and islands in America, ceded to his Majesty by the definitive treaty of peace, concluded at Paris on the tenth day of February, one thousand seven hundred and sixty three; and whereas by the arrangements made by the said Royal Proclamation, a very large extent of country, within which there were several colonies and settlements of the subjects of France,^a who claimed to remain therein under the faith of the said treaty, was left without any provision being made for the administration of civil government therein; and certain parts of the territory of Canada, where sedentary fisheries had been established and carried on by the subjects of France, inhabitants of the said Province of Canada, under grants and concessions from the Government thereof, were annexed to the Government of Newfoundland, and thereby subjected to regulations inconsistent with the nature of such fisheries. May it therefore please your Most Excellent Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same: That all the territories, islands, and countries in North America, belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, bounded on the south by a line from the Bay of Chaleurs, along the high lands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the River St. Lawrence from those which fall into the sea, to a point in forty-five degrees of Northern latitude on the Eastern bank of the River Connecticutt, keeping the same latitude directly west through the Lake Champlain until, in the same latitude, it meets the River St. Lawrence; from thence up the Eastern bank of the said River to the Lake Ontario; thence through the Lake Ontario, and the River commonly called Niagara; and thence along by the Eastern and South-Eastern bank of Lake Erie, following the said bank until the same shall be intersected by the Northern boundary granted by the charter of the Province of Pennsylvania, in case the same shall be so intersected; and from thence along the said Northern and Western boundaries of the said Province until the said Western boundary strike the Ohio: But in case the said bank of the said Lake shall not be found to be so intersected, then following the said bank until it shall arrive at that point of the said bank which shall be nearest to the northwest angle of the said Province of Pennsylvania, and thence by a right line to the said northwest angle of the said Province, and thence along the Western boundary of the said Province, until it strike the River Ohio; and along the Bank of the said River westward to the banks of the Mississippi, and Northward³ to the Southern boundary of the territory granted to the Merchants Adventurers of England trading to Hudson's Bay; and also all such territories, islands, and countries, which have since the tenth of February, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three been made part of the Government of Newfoundland—be, and they are hereby, Annexed to the Province of Quebec. during his Majesty's pleasure, annexed to and made part and parcel of the Province of Quebec, as created and established by the said Royal Proclamation of the seventh of October, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three.

II. Provided always, that nothing herein contained, relative to the boundary of the Province of Quebec shall in any wise affect the boundaries of any other colony. Not to affect the boundaries of any other Colony;

III. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this Act shall extend, or be construed to extend, to make void or to vary or alter any right, title, or possession derived under any grant, conveyance, or otherwise howsoever, of or to any lands within the said Province or the Provinces thereto adjoining; but that the same shall remain, and be in force, and have effect as if this Act had never been made. nor to make void other rights formerly granted.

IV. And whereas the provisions made by the said Proclamation in respect to the civil government of the said Province of Quebec, and the powers and authorities given to the Governor and other civil officers of the said Province by the grants and commissions issued in consequence Former provisions for the Province to be null and void after May 1st, 1775.

thereof, have been found upon experience to be inapplicable to the state and circumstances of the said Province, the inhabitants whereof amounted at the conquest to above sixty-five thousand persons professing the religion of the Church of Rome, and enjoying an established form of constitution and system of laws by which their persons and property had been protected, governed, and ordered for a long series of years from the first establishment of the said Province of Canada;* be it therefore enacted by the Authority aforesaid, that the said Proclamation, so far as the same relates to the said Province of Quebec, and the Commission under the authority whereof the Government of the said Province is at present administered, and all and every the Ordinance and Ordinances made by the Governor and Council of Quebec for the time being relative to the civil government and administration of justice in the said Province, and all Commissions to judges and other officers thereof, be, and the same are hereby revoked, annulled, and made void^b from and after the first day of May, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five.

Inhabitants of Quebec may profess the Romish religion, subject to the King's supremacy, as by Act I. Eliz.; and the Clergy enjoy their accustomed dues.

V. "So help me GOD."

And every such person, who shall neglect or refuse to take the said oath before mentioned, shall incur and be liable to the same penalties, forfeitures, disabilities, and incapacities as he would have incurred and been liable to for neglecting or refusing to take the oath required by the said statute passed in the first year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

The Quebec Revenue Act, 1775.

An Act²⁴ for amending and explaining an Act,²⁵ passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to establish a Fund towards further defraying the charges of the Administration of Justice and support of the Civil Government within the Province of Quebec, in America."

Preamble.
Clause in Act
14 Geo. III.,
recited.

Whereas by an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign (intituled, "An Act to establish a fund towards further defraying the charges of the administration of justice and support of the Civil Government within the Province of Quebec in America"), it is amongst other things enacted, that if any goods, chargeable with any of the duties in the said Act mentioned, shall be brought into the said Province by land carriage, the same shall pass and be carried through the Port of Saint John's, near the River Sorrel; or if such goods shall be brought into the said Province by any inland navigation other than that upon the River Saint Lawrence, the same shall pass and be carried upon the said River Sorrel by the said port, and shall be there entered with, and the said respective rates and duties paid for the same to, such officer or officers of his Majesty's customs as shall there be appointed for that purpose; and if any such goods, coming by land carriage or inland navigation, as aforesaid, shall pass by or beyond the said place before named, without entry or payment of the said rates and duties, or shall be brought into any part of the said Province by or through any other place whatsoever, the said goods shall be forfeited; and every person who shall be assisting, or otherwise concerned in the bringing or removing such goods, or to whose hands the same shall come, knowing that they were brought or removed contrary to this Act, shall forfeit treble the value of such goods; to be estimated and computed according to the best price that each respective commodity bears in the town of Quebec at the time such offence shall be committed; and all the horses, cattle, boats, vessels, and other carriages whatsoever, made use of in the removal, carriage, or conveyance of such goods, shall be forfeited and lost, and shall and may be seized by any officer of his Majesty's Customs, and prosecuted as thereafter mentioned: And whereas there is reason to apprehend that the regulations and restrictions contained in the said hereinbefore recited clause, so far as they relate to the bringing of rum, brandy, or other spirits into the Province of Quebec by land carriage, may, without further explanation, operate to the prejudice and disadvantage of the commerce carried on with the Indians²⁶ in the upper or interior parts of the said Province: We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That it shall and may be lawful to and for all his Majesty's subjects freely to bring, carry or convey, by land carriage or inland navigation, into any ports of the Province of Quebec,²⁷ not heretofore comprehended within the limits thereof by his Majesty's Royal Proclamation of the seventh of October, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three, any quantity of rum, brandy, or other spirits, anything contained in the before-recited Act of Parliament to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

His Majesty's subjects may bring, by land or inland navigation, into any ports of Quebec not heretofore comprehended in the Royal Proclamation of Oct. 7, 1763, any quantity of rum, brandy, etc.

The Colonial Tax Repeal Act, 1778.

An Act²⁸ for removing all doubts and apprehensions concerning taxation by the Parliament of Great Britain in any of the Colonies, Provinces, and Plantations in North America and the West Indies; and for repealing so much of an Act, made in the seventh year of the reign of his present Majesty, as imposes a duty on tea imported from Great Britain into any Colony or Plantation in America, or relates thereto.

Preamble.

Whereas taxation by the Parliament of Great Britain, for the purpose of raising a revenue in his Majesty's Colonies, Provinces, and Plantations in North America,²⁹ has been found by experience to occasion great uneasiness and disorders among his Majesty's faithful subjects, who may nevertheless be disposed to acknowledge the justice of contributing to the common defence of the Empire, provided such contribution should be raised under the authority of the General Court,³⁰ or General Assembly, of each respective Colony, Province, or Plantation: And whereas, in order as well to remove the said uneasiness, and to quiet the minds of his Majesty's subjects who may be disposed to return to their allegiance, as to restore the peace and welfare of all his Majesty's Dominions, it is expedient to declare that the King and Parliament of Great Britain will³¹ not impose any duty, tax, or assessment, for the purpose of raising a revenue in any of the Colonies, Provinces, or Plantations: May it please your Majesty that it may be declared and enacted, and it is hereby declared and enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act the King and Parliament of Great Britain will not impose any duty, tax, or assessment whatever, payable in any of his Majesty's Colonies, Provinces, and Plantations in North America or the West Indies { except only such duties as it may be expedient to impose for the regulation of commerce; the net produce of such duties to be always paid and applied to and for the use of the Colony, Province, or Plantation, in which the same shall be respectively levied, in such manner as other duties collected by the authority of the respective General Courts, or General Assemblies, of such Colonies, Provinces, or Plantations, are ordinarily paid and applied.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the passing of this Act, so much of an Act²² made in the seventh year of his present Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for granting certain duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America; for allowing a drawback of the duties of Customs upon the exportation from this kingdom of coffee and cocoanuts of the produce of the said Colonies or Plantations; for discontinuing the drawbacks payable on China earthenware exported to America; and for more effectually preventing the clandestine running of goods in said Colonies or Plantations," as imposes a duty on tea imported from Great Britain into any Colony or Plantation in America, or has relation to the said duty, be, and the same is hereby repealed.

So much of an Act, 7 Geo. III., as imposes a duty on tea imported from Great Britain into America repealed.

An Act⁸⁸ to amend an Act of the fourteenth year of His Majesty King George the Third, for establishing a fund towards defraying the charges of the administration of justice and support of the civil government within the Province of Quebec in America.

22ND SEPTEMBER, 1831.

- 14 G. 3, cap. 88. Whereas by an Act passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Third, intituled "An Act to establish a Fund towards further defraying the charges of the administration of justice and support of the Civil Government within the Province of Quebec in America," it was amongst other things enacted that from and after the fifth day of April, one thousand, seven hundred and seventy-five, there should be raised, levied, collected and paid unto his said late Majesty, his heirs and successors, for and upon the respective goods thereafter mentioned, which should be imported and brought into any port of the said Province, over and above all other duties then payable in the said Province by any Act or Acts of Parliament, the several rates and duties therein mentioned; (that is to say,) for every gallon of brandy or other spirits of the manufacture of Great Britain, three-pence; for every gallon of rum or other spirits, which should be imported or brought from any of his Majesty's sugar colonies in the West Indies, six-pence; for every gallon of rum or other spirits which should be imported or brought from any other of his Majesty's colonies or dominions in America, nine-pence; for every gallon of foreign brandy, or other spirits of foreign manufacture, imported or brought from Great Britain, one shilling; for every gallon of rum or of the produce or manufactures of any of the Colonies or Plantations in America not in the possession or under the Dominion of his Majesty imported from any other place except Great Britain, one shilling; for every gallon of molasses and syrups which should be imported or brought in the said Province in ships or vessels belonging to his Majesty's subjects in Great Britain or Ireland, or to his Majesty's subjects in the said Province, three-pence; for every gallon of molasses and syrups which should be imported or brought into the said Province in any other ships or vessels in which the same might be legally imported, six-pence; and after those rates for any greater or less quantity of such goods respectively; and it was thereby further enacted that all the monies that should arise by the said duties (except the necessary charges of raising, collecting, levying, recovering, answering, paying, and accounting for the same, should be paid by the Collector of his Majesty's customs into the hands of his Majesty's Receiver-General in the said Province for the time being, and should be applied in the first place in making a more certain and adequate provision towards defraying the expenses of the administration of justice and of the support of the Civil Government in the said Province; and that the Lord High Treasurer, or the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or any three or more of them for the time being should be and they were thereby empowered from time to time by any warrant or warrants under his or their hand or hands, to cause such money to be applied out of the said produce of the said duties towards defraying said expenses; and it was thereby enacted that the residue of the said duties should remain and be reserved in the hands of the said Receiver-General for the future dispositions of Parliament: And whereas the said Province of Quebec hath since the enactment of the said Act been divided into the two Provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada: And whereas it is expedient to make further provision for the appropriation of the duties raised, levied and collected under the said Act; be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the Legislative Councils and Assemblies of the said Provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada³⁴ respectively, by any Acts to be by them from time to time passed and assented to by his Majesty, his heirs, and successors, or on his or their behalf, to appropriate³⁵ in such manner, and to such purposes as to them respectively shall seem meet, all the monies that shall hereafter arise by, or be produced from the said duties, except so much of such monies as shall be necessarily defrayed for the charges of raising, collecting, levying, recovering, answering, paying, and accounting for the same.

NOTES TO THE QUEBEC ACT, 1774, AND SUPPLEMENTARY ACTS.

¹ This Act is 14 Geo. III., Cap. 83. The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1776. The best account of the proceedings connected with its progress through the British Parliament is given in Sir Henry Cavendish's "Debates on the Canada Bill in 1774," London, 1839. For many interesting documents relating to the state of affairs in Quebec see Maseres' "Account of the Proceedings of the British and other Protestant Inhabitants of the Province of Quebec in North America, in order to obtain an House of Assembly in that Province," and also his "Additional Papers Concerning the Province of Quebec." In his "Canadian Freeholder" he discusses fully the policy which prompted the passing of the Act. The author had been Attorney General of Quebec from 1766 to 1772. See also Garneau's "History of Canada." Book XI, Cap. I.

² Some of these "settlements" are referred to in Art. 39 of the Montreal Capitulation. For a very full list of these "colonies and settlements," see the Ontario Sessional Papers of 1879, No. 31, p. 445. They were distributed along the great lakes, over the region between Lake Erie and the Ohio River as far west as the Mississippi, over the territory between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi, and over the district tributary to the Red River and Lake Winnipeg. How much of all this vast area was included in the Montreal Capitulation cannot now be ascertained, for the Marquis de Vaudreuil, in a letter written in 1761, denied having ever given the British authorities any definite boundary of the surrendered territory. On this point see the collection of documents entitled "Ontario Boundaries before the Privy Council, 1834," and the "Annual Register" for 1761. The French settlers on the Illinois were especially urgent in their requests for some regular form of government.

¹¹ The "benefit of the laws" of England was by the Royal Proclamation of 1763 conferred on the inhabitants of Quebec. As to the extent to which English law was by this means introduced, see Note 5 to Governor Murray's Commission. English law was reintroduced into Upper Canada in 1792 by the first Parliament of that Province (32 Geo. III., cap. 1).

¹⁴ For an explanation of the alleged inexpediency of calling an Assembly see Cavendish's "Debates," and Maseres' "Account" and "Papers" mentioned in Note 1.

¹⁵ For the means of raising a Provincial revenue see 14 Geo. III., cap. 88. Four years after the passing of that Act there was passed another (18 George III., cap. 12), which declared that the King and Parliament of Great Britain would no longer tax the colonies, but this declaration did not take effect in Quebec. For ordinances passed by the Council dealing with municipal matters see vol. O. of the "Statutes of Lower Canada." No municipal machinery was ever organized for the Province under this section. In Appendix C to Lord Durham's Report will be found an account of the general character of the municipal legislation of the Council of 1774-1791 and of the Assembly of 1791-1837.

¹⁷ The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1776. The statute is 14 George III., cap. 88.

¹⁸ The date of the imposition of these duties could not be definitely ascertained after the cession of Canada to Great Britain, as appears from an account given by Maseres, in his "Collection of Several Commissions," of two unsuccessful attempts made by the British Government to enforce by law the payment of new duties imposed by Governor Murray. The French duties were said to have been paid for at least fifty years before the conquest.

²⁶ Alcoholic liquors from a very early period in the history of both the French and the English colonies, played an important part in the fur trade with the Indians. In Canada there were constant disputes about the matter between the Bishop and the Governor. See Kingsford's "History of Canada," Book II., chap. 11; Book III., chaps. 5 and 8; Book X., chap. 2; and other passages.

²⁹ The right of the Imperial Parliament to tax the colonies was first practically asserted by the passage of the Stamp Act in 1765 (5 George III., cap. 12). This was repealed the following year (6 George III., cap. 11), and at the same time an Act (6 George III., cap. 12), was passed declaring that the legislative authority of Great Britain extended to all the colonies, in all cases whatsoever. It was in the debate on this declaratory Act that Lord Mansfield made his celebrated speech to prove the "right" of Great Britain to tax her colonies, and that William Pitt (afterwards Lord Chatham) made his equally celebrated speech to prove the "expediency" of refraining from the exercise of that right. In 1767 an Act (7 Geo. III., cap. 46) was passed imposing certain customs duties on goods imported into the colonies, and in 1770 this was repealed, by 10 Geo. III., cap. 17, as to several of the duties; the duty on tea was maintained till the Act of 1778 was passed.

was declared that the clergy of the Church of Rome in the Province of Quebec might hold, receive, and enjoy their accustomed dues and rights, with respect to such persons only as should profess the said religion; provided nevertheless that it should be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to make such provision out of the rest of the said accustomed dues and rights for the encouragement of the Protestant religion and for the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy within the said Province as he or they should from time to time think necessary and expedient: And whereas by his Majesty's Royal instruction, given under his Majesty's Royal sign manual on the third of January in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five to Guy Carleton, Esquire, now Lord Dorchester, at that time his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor in Chief in and over his Majesty's Province of Quebec, his Majesty was pleased amongst other things to direct that no incumbent professing the religion of the Church of Rome, appointed to any parish in the said Province, should be entitled to receive any tythes for lands or possessions occupied by a Protestant, but that such tythes should be received by such persons as the said Guy Carleton, Esquire, his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor in Chief in and over his Majesty's said Province of Quebec, should appoint, and should be reserved in the hands of his Majesty's Receiver-General of the said Province for the support of a Protestant clergy in his Majesty's said Province to be actually resident within the same, and not otherwise, according to such directions as the said Guy Carleton, Esquire, his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor in Chief in and over his Majesty's said Province, should receive from his Majesty in that behalf; and that in like manner all growing rents and profits of a vacant benefice should during such vacancy be reserved for and applied to the like uses; and whereas his Majesty's pleasure has likewise been signified to the same effect in his Majesty's Royal instructions given in like manner to Sir Frederick Haldimand, Knight of the most honorable Order of the Bath, late his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor in Chief in and over his Majesty's said Province of Quebec; and to Lord Dorchester, and also in his Majesty's Royal instructions given in like manner to the said Right Honorable Guy Lord Dorchester, now his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor in Chief in and over his Majesty's said Province of Quebec; be it and the declaration and provisions therein enacted by the authority aforesaid that the said declaration

And be it further enacted by the authority and the rents aforesaid that all and every the rents, profits, or emoluments, which may at any time arise from such lands so to be applicable to that purpose solely, allotted and appropriated as aforesaid, shall be applicable solely to the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy within the Province in which the same shall be situated, and to no other purpose whatever.¹³

XXXVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority His Majesty aforesaid that it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, the Governor, his heirs and successors, to authorize the Governor or with the advice of the Lieutenant-Governor of each of the said Provinces respectively, or the person administering the Government therein, Executive Council, to from time to time, with the advice of such Executive Council, to erect parsonages and endow them, as shall have been appointed by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, within such Province for the affairs thereof, to constitute and erect within every township or parish which is now or hereafter may be formed, constituted, or erected within such Province, one or more parsonage or rectory, or parsonages or rectories, according to the establishment of the Church of England; and from time to time by instrument under the great Seal of such Province to endow every such parsonage or rectory with so much or such a part of the lands so allotted and appropriated as aforesaid, in respect of any lands with such township or parish which shall have been granted subsequent to the commencement of this Act or of such lands as may have been allotted and appropriated for the same purpose, by or in virtue of any instruction which may be given by his Majesty in respect of any lands granted by his Majesty before the commencement of this Act, as such Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or XXXIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to authorize the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of each of the said Provinces respectively, to present to every such parsonage or rectory an incumbent or minister of the Church of England, who shall have been duly ordained according to the rites of the said Church, and to supply from time to time such vacancies as may happen therein; and that every person so presented to any such parsonage or rectory shall hold and enjoy the same, and all rights, profits, and emoluments thereunto belonging or granted, as fully and amply, and in the same manner, and on the same terms and conditions, and liable to the performance of the same duties, as the incumbent of a parsonage or rectory in England.

Presentations to parsonages and the enjoyment of them to be subject to the jurisdiction granted to the Bishop of Nova Scotia, etc.

XL. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that every such presentation of an incumbent or minister to any such parsonage or rectory, and also the enjoyment of any such parsonage or rectory, and of the rights, profits, and emoluments thereof, by any such incumbent or minister, shall be subject and liable to all rights of institution, and all other spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction and authority, which have been lawfully granted by his Majesty's Royal letters patent to the Bishop of Nova Scotia, or which may hereafter by his Majesty's Royal authority be lawfully granted or appointed to be administered and executed within the said Provinces, or either of them respectively, by the said Bishop of Nova Scotia, or by any other person or persons, according to the laws and canons of the Church of England which are lawfully made and received in England.¹⁴

Provisions respecting the allotment of lands for the support of a Protestant clergy, etc., may be varied or repealed by the Legislative Council and Assembly.

XLI. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the several provisions hereinbefore contained, respecting the allotment and appropriation of lands for the support of a Protestant clergy within the said Provinces, and also respecting the constituting, erecting, and endowing parsonages or rectories within the said Provinces, and also respecting the presentation of incumbents or miisters to the same, and also respecting the manner in which such incumbents or ministers shall hold and enjoy the same shall be subject to be varied or repealed by any express provisions for that purpose contained in any Act or Acts which may be passed by the Legislative Council and Assembly of the said Provinces respectively, and assented to by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, under the restriction herein after provided.¹⁵

XLII. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that whenever any Act or Acts shall be passed by the Legislative Council and Assembly of either of the said Provinces, containing any provisions to vary or repeal the above recited declaration and provision contained in the said Act passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of his present Majesty; or to vary or repeal the above recited provision contained in his Majesty's Royal instructions given on the third day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five to the said Guy Carleton, Esquire, now Lord Dorchester; or to vary or repeal the provisions herein before contained for continuing the force and effect of the said declaration and provisions; or to vary or repeal any of the several provisions herein before contained respecting the allotment and appropriation of lands for the support of a Protestant clergy within the said Provinces; or respecting the constituting, erecting, or endowing parsonages or rectories within the said Provinces; or respecting the presentations of incumbents or ministers to the same; or respecting the manner in which such incumbents or ministers shall hold and enjoy the same: And also that whenever any Act or Acts shall be so passed, containing any provisions which shall in any manner relate to or affect the enjoyment or exercise of any religious form or mode of worship; or shall impose or create any penalties, burthens, disabilities, or disqualifications in respect of the same; or shall in any manner relate to or affect the payment, recovery, or enjoyment of any of the accustomed dues or rights herein before mentioned; or shall in any manner relate to the granting, imposing, or recovering any other dues or stipends, or emoluments whatever, to be paid to or for the use of any minister, priest, ecclesiastic, or teacher according to any religious form or mode of worship, in respect of of his said office or function; or shall in any manner relate to or affect the establishment or discipline of the Church of England amongst the ministers and members

XLIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all lands which shall be hereafter granted within the said Province of Upper Canada shall be granted in free and common soccage, in like manner as lands are now holden in free and common soccage in that part of Great Britain called England; and that in every case where lands shall be hereafter granted within the said Province of Lower Canada, and where the grantee thereof shall desire the same to be granted in free and common soccage, the same shall be so granted; but subject nevertheless to such alterations with respect to the nature and consequences of such tenure of free and common soccage, as may be established by any law or laws which may be made by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province.¹⁶

Persons holding lands in Upper Canada may have fresh grants.

XLIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any person or persons holding lands in the said Province of Upper Canada¹⁷ by virtue of any certificate of occupation derived under the authority of the Governor and Council of the Province of Quebec, and having power and authority to alienate the same, shall at any time from and after the commencement of this Act surrender the same into the hands of his Majesty, his heirs or successors, by petition to the Governor, or Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government of the said Province, setting forth that he, she, or they, is or are desirous of holding the same in free and common soccage, such Governor, or Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government shall thereupon cause a fresh grant to be made to such person of such lands to be holden in free and common soccage.

And whereas, by reason of the distance of the said Provinces from this country, and of the change to be made by this Act in the Government thereof, it may be necessary that there should be some interval of time between the notification of this Act to the said Provinces respectively, and the day of its commencement within the said Provinces respectively; be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, that it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, with the advice of the Privy Council, to fix and declare, or to authorize the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec, or the person administering the Government there to fix and declare the day of the commencement of this Act within the said Provinces respectively, provided that such day shall not be later than the thirty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one.²⁰

XLIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the time to be fixed by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, or under his or their authority by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the Government in each of the said Provinces respectively, for issuing the writs of summons and election, and calling together the Legislative Councils and Assemblies of each of the said Provinces respectively, shall not be later than the thirty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two.²¹

L. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that during such interval as may happen between the commencement of this Act and the first meeting of the Legislative Council and Assembly of each of the said Provinces respectively, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of such Province, or for the person administering the Government therein, with the consent of the major part of such Executive Council as shall be appointed by his Majesty for the affairs of such Province, to make temporary laws and ordinances for the good government, peace, and welfare of such Province, in the same manner and under the same restrictions as such laws or ordinances might have been made by the Council for the affairs of the Province of Quebec constituted by virtue of the above mentioned Act of the fourteenth year of the reign of his present Majesty; and that such temporary laws shall be valid and binding within such Province until the expiration of six months after the Legislative Council and Assembly of such Province shall have been first assembled by virtue of and under the authority of this Act; subject nevertheless to be sooner repealed or varied by any law or laws which may be made by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, by and with the advice and consent of the said Legislative Council and Assembly.

NOTES TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL ACT AND SUPPLEMENTARY ACTS.

¹ This statute is 31 George III., cap. 31. The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1794. For a full report of the debates on the measure while it was in progress through the British Parliament see Clarendon's "Parliamentary Chronicle," Vol. III. One of the chief causes of the passage of this Act was the influx of British immigrants, known as "United Empire Loyalists," who settled at various points along the north shore of Lake Ontario, and in the Niagara peninsula.

² This intention was not carried out till after the Act was passed. On the 24th of August, 1791, two "Orders" were passed by the King in Council, one making the division of Quebec into Upper and Lower Canada by a boundary defined in the "Order;" the other citing this "Order" and enjoining the issue of a warrant authorizing the Governor of Quebec to fix a day for the Act to go into operation. Both Orders in Council are given at length in the collection of papers entitled "Ontario Boundaries before Privy Council, 1884." Lieutenant-Governor Clarke, in the absence of Lord Dorchester, proclaimed the 26th of December, 1791, as the day when the division of the Province should take effect. The text of his proclamation is given in Vol. O. of the "Statutes of Lower Canada."

³ See Note 1 to "Representative Assemblies in the Maritime Provinces."

⁴ See 11 George IV. & 1 William IV., cap. 53, appended to this Act.

⁶ The proclamation dividing Lower Canada into electoral districts was issued at Quebec by Lieutenant-Governor Clarke on the 7th of May, 1792; the text will be found in Vol. O. of the "Statutes of Lower Canada." The proclamation dividing Upper Canada was issued at Kingston by Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe on the 16th of July, 1792, and the text of it is given in full in Thomson and McFarlane's collection of "Statutes of Upper Canada, 1791-1831," (Kingston, 1831).

⁷ Lieutenant-Governor Clarke's proclamation announcing the issue of writs for the election of the first Lower Canadian Assembly was dated the 14th of May, 1792, and the writs were made returnable on the 10th of July following. The text of the proclamation is given in Vol. O. of the "Statutes of Lower Canada."

⁸ See Note 4 above.

The first Parliament of Lower Canada met at Quebec on the 17th of December, 1792. For an account of its organization and work see Christie's "History of the Late Province of Lower Canada," Vol. I., cap. IV. The first Parliament of Upper Canada met at Niagara, then Newark, on the 17th of September, 1792. An account of its work will be found in Read's "Life of Governor Simcoe."

¹¹ The ordinance above referred to is 32 George III., cap. 1. It was passed as a temporary measure, and its operation was prolonged in Lower Canada by Act of the first Parliament, 33 George III., cap. 3. This was in turn repealed by 34 George III., cap. 6. In Upper Canada a Court of Appeal was established by 34 George III., cap. 2.

¹² Tithes payable to the clergy of "the Protestant Church" were abolished by Act of the Upper Canadian Legislature (2 George IV., cap. 32).

¹⁴ Under the authority of these clauses Sir John Colborne, when Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, in 1836 issued letters patent creating fifty-seven rectories. The text of the instrument which created and endowed the "Parsonage or Rectory of St. James," in the township of York, is given in full in the bill filed in Chancery in the "Rectories Case," August 25th, 1852, by Attorney-General Richards. The prayer of the bill was that the letters patent should be declared void and that the lands constituting the endowment should be given up. The decision of the Court was that the Lieutenant-Governor had authority under these sections to create and endow rectories, and this decision has never since been reversed. See the volume known as "The Rectories Case, Upper Canada," containing the bill in Chancery and many other documents; Vols. V. and VI. of Grant's Chancery Reports, Upper Canada; "Religious Endowments in Canada," by Sir Francis Hincks (London, 1869); and "Reminiscences of His Public Life," by the same author.

¹⁸ See "Colonial Taxation Act" above.

¹⁹ Disputes soon arose between Upper and Lower Canada over the division of the revenue from customs duties on goods imported by way of the St. Lawrence. An agreement was arrived at in 1817, that one-fifth of all the duties collected in Lower Canada should be paid to Upper Canada, and this was ratified in the following year by Act of Parliament of Lower Canada (58 George III., cap. 4), and by Act of Parliament of Upper Canada (58 George III., cap. 13). The Lower Canadian Statute expired on the first of July, 1819, and the Assembly refused to renew it. This refusal ultimately led to the passage of the Imperial Statute known as "The Canada Trade Act" (3 George IV., cap. 119), which made permanent the agreement that one-fifth of the duties should go to Upper Canada. See Christie's "History of Lower Canada," Vol. II., cap. 23.

²⁰ See Note 2 above.

²¹ See Notes 7 and 9 above.

²² This Act is 11 George IV. & 1 William IV., cap. 53. The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1832.

²³ See "The Constitutional Act, 1791," section 4.

²⁴ The English "Hansard" does not give any of the discussions on this measure in its progress through Parliament, and the Canadian histories are silent as to the reasons for its enactment.

²⁵ This Statute is 1 & 2 Vict., cap. 9. The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1838.

²⁶ For an account of the state of the Province which led to the passing of this Act see Christie's "History of Lower Canada," Vol. IV.; Garneau's "Histoire du Canada," Vol. III.; and Lord Durham's Report. On the 6th of March, 1836, the British House of Commons adopted a series of resolutions which declared it inexpedient to comply with the demand of the Legislative Assembly for an elective Legislative Council. When the Assembly met the following year it accepted these resolutions as "a formal and total refusal of the reforms and improvements" demanded by that House. The Legislature met on the 18th of August, 1837, and on the 26th of the same month it was prorogued by Lord Gosford never to be summoned again. The immediate result was a resort to arms on the part of the leaders of the Assembly, and a more remote one was the passage of this Act by the British Parliament in February, 1838, and its proclamation in Lower Canada on the 29th of March following.

²⁹ This Act is 1 & 2 Vict., cap. 112. It is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1838.

³¹ The passage of this Act chagrined Lord Durham to such an extent that he soon afterwards retired to England.

³² This statute is 2 & 3 Vict., cap. 53. It is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1841.

³⁴ Sir John Colborne succeeded Lord Durham in the administration of the Government of Lower Canada.

³⁵ No amending Act was passed during that session; the next statute dealing with the constitution was the Union Act of 1840.

XLIX. And whereas by a certain Act passed in the third year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Fourth, intituled, "An Act to regulate the Trade of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and for other purposes relating to the said Provinces," certain provisions were made for appointing arbitrators with power to hear and determine certain claims of the Province of Upper Canada upon the Province of Lower Canada, and to hear any claim which might be advanced on the part of the Province of Upper Canada to a proportion of certain duties therein mentioned, and for prescribing the course of proceeding to be pursued by such arbitrators²⁰; be it enacted that the said recited provisions of the said last-mentioned Act, and all matters in the same Act contained, which are consequent to or dependent upon the said provisions or any of them, shall be repealed. An Act²⁰ to empower the Legislature of Canada to alter the Constitution of the Legislative Council for that Province, and for other purposes.

[11TH AUGUST, 1854.]

Whereas an Act²⁰ of the session of Parliament holden in the third and fourth years of her Majesty, chapter thirty-five, "to reunite the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and for the Government of Canada," provides amongst other things for the establishment of a Legislative Council in the Province of Canada, consisting of members summoned thereto by the Governor, under the authority of her Majesty as therein specified: And whereas it is expedient²¹ that the Legislature of the said Province should be empowered to alter the constitution of the said Legislative Council: And whereas the said Act requires amendment in other respects: Be it enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

I. It shall be lawful for the Legislature of Canada, by any Act or Acts to be hereinafter for that purpose passed, to alter the manner of composing the Legislative Council of the said Province, and to make it consist of such number of members appointed or to be appointed or elected by such persons and in such manner as to the said Legislature may seem fit, and to fix the qualifications of the persons capable of being so appointed or elected, and by such Act or Acts to make provision, if they shall think fit, for the separate dissolution, by the Governor of the said Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly respectively, and for the purposes aforesaid to vary and repeal in such manner as to them may seem fit all or any of the sections of the said recited Act, and of any other Act of Parliament now in force, which relate to the constitution of the Legislative Council of Canada: Provided always that any bill or bills which shall be passed by the present Legislative Council and Assembly of Canada for all or any of the purposes Provisions of former Acts of Parliament to apply to the new Legislative Council.

II. As soon as the constitution of the Legislative Council of the Province of Canada shall have been altered under such Act or Acts so assented to by her Majesty as aforesaid, all provisions of the said recited Act of Parliament of the third and fourth years of her Majesty, chapter thirty-five, and of any other Act of Parliament now in force relating to the Legislative Council of Canada, shall be held to apply to the Legislative Council of Canada so altered, except so far as such provisions may have been varied or repealed by such Act or Acts of the Legislature of Canada so assented to as aforesaid.

Legislature of Canada may vary Acts constituting the new Legislative Council;

III. It shall be lawful for the Legislature of Canada from time to time to vary and repeal all or any of the provisions of the Act or Acts altering the constitution of the said Legislative Council: Provided always, that any bill for any such purpose, which shall vary the qualification of councillors, or the duration of office of such councillors, or the power of the Governor to dissolve the Council or Assembly, shall be reserved by the Governor for the signification of her Majesty's pleasure in manner aforesaid.

Proviso in section 26 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 35 repealed.

V. So much of the twenty-sixth section of the said recited Act of Parliament as provides that it shall not be lawful to present to the Governor of the Province of Canada, for her Majesty's assent, any bill of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the said Province by which the number of representatives in the Legislative Assembly may be altered unless the second and third readings of such bill in the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly shall have been passed with the concurrence of two-thirds of the members for the time being of the said Legislative Council, and of two-thirds of the members for the time being of the said Legislative Assembly respectively, and that the assent of her Majesty shall not be given to any such bill unless addresses shall have been presented by the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly respectively to the Governor stating that such bill has been so passed, is hereby repealed.

VI. The forty-second section of the said recited Act of Parliament, providing that in certain cases Bills of the Legislative Council and Assembly of Canada shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament of the United Kingdom, is hereby repealed; and notwithstanding anything in the said Act of Parliament, or in any other Act of Parliament contained, it shall be lawful for the Governor to declare that he assents in her Majesty's name to any bill of the Legislature of Canada, or for her Majesty to assent to any such bill if reserved for the signification of her pleasure thereon, although such bill shall not have been laid before the said Houses of Parliament; and no Act heretofore passed, or to be passed by the Legislature of Canada shall be held invalid or ineffectual by reason of the same not having been laid before the said Houses, or by reason of the Legislative Council and Assembly not having presented to the Governor such address as by the said Act of Parliament is required.

An Act³⁴ to empower the Legislature of Canada to make laws regulating the appointment of a Speaker of the Legislative Council.

[8TH AUGUST, 1856.]

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the Session of Parliament, holden in the third and fourth years of Her Majesty, chapter thirty-five, "to re-unite the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and for the Government of Canada," it is amongst other things provided that the Governor of the Province of Canada shall have power and authority, from time to time, by an instrument under the Great Seal of the said Province, to appoint one member of the said Legislative Council to be Speaker of the said Legislative Council, and to remove him and appoint another in his stead: And, whereas by an Act passed in the Session of Parliament holden in the seventeenth and eighteenth years of Her Majesty, chapter one hundred and eighteen, "to empower the Legislature of Canada to alter the constitution of the Legislative Council for that Province, and for other purposes," power was given to the Legislature of Canada to alter the manner of composing the Legislative Council for that Province, and to make it consist of such number of persons appointed, or to be appointed, or elected by such persons and in such manner as to the said Legislature may seem fit, in the manner and subject to the conditions by that Act provided, and for the purpose aforesaid to vary and repeal, in such manner as to them may seem fit, all or any of the provisions of the first-recited Act, and of any other Act of Parliament now in force which relate to the constitution of the Legislative Council of Canada; and it was thereby further enacted, that the Speaker of the Legislative Council should, as theretofore, be appointed by the Governor: And, whereas the said Legislature, in pursuance of the powers conferred on them by the said last-recited Act, have, by an Act of the Province of Canada passed in the Session of the said Legislature holden in the nineteenth and twentieth years of Her Majesty,³⁵ "to change the con-

I. It shall be lawful for the Legislature of Canada, by any Act⁸⁶ or Acts passed in the manner and subject to the conditions specified in the said last-recited Act of Parliament, to alter the constitution of the Legislative Council of the said Province by providing for the appointment or election of a Speaker of the said Council; and for this purpose to vary and repeal, in such manner as to them may seem fit, so much of the hereinbefore recited sections of the said Acts of Parliament, and of the provisions of the said recited or any other Acts of Parliament as relates to the appointment of such Speaker.

Full reports of the discussions on the various stages of the measure in its progress through both Houses of Parliament are given in "Hansard's Parliamentary Debates," Third Series, vols. 52, 53, 54, and 55, (1840). The occasion of this legislation was the series of political disorders which culminated in the Rebellion of 1837-38. See Note 26 on the "Constitutional Act and Supplementary Acts" (p. 148). The Act was based on the recommendations contained in Lord Durham's Report, and is said to have been drafted by Chief Justice Stuart of Lower Canada under the direction of Governor Thomson, afterwards Lord Sydenham. It was strongly opposed in both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, but as Sir Robert Peel supported Lord John Russell in carrying it through the former, the opposition there was rather on specific clauses than on the principle of the bill. Protests against the third reading in the House of Lords were entered on the journals by the Duke of Wellington and Lord Ellenborough, the most prominent grounds in each case being the extent of the united provinces and the want of harmony between their populations.

² See Lord Durham's Report, and Lord John Russell's speech on his motion for leave to introduce the measure in the House of Commons (Hansard, Third Series, vol. 52, pp. 1323-1354).

³ This proclamation was issued by Lord Sydenham on the 5th of February, 1841, and it declared that the union of the Provinces should take effect on the 10th of the same month. The text of the proclamation is given in the Journals of the Legislative Assembly for the first session of the first Provincial Parliament of Canada (1841).

⁸ The Constitutional Act, 1791.

⁹ Very little objection was made to life-membership in the course of the debates on the bill in Parliament. Mr. Joseph Hume suggested that a portion of the Council should be chosen by the people, but the suggestion was not supported and was not pressed. See the "Union Act Amendment Act" of 1854 (pp. 177-179 below), which empowered the Canadian Parliament to alter the Constitution of the Legislative Council. See also the Act passed by the Canadian Parliament in 1856 (19 & 20 Vict., cap. 140), making the Legislative Council elective.

¹⁰ See pp. 136-139.

¹¹ The effect of the operation of sections xiii-xx of the Union Act was to give Upper and Lower Canada each 42 members in the Legislative Assembly. By an Act (16 Vict., cap. 152), passed in 1853, under the authority conferred by section xxvi. of the Union Act, this number was increased to 65, and the membership of the Assembly then remained unchanged till 1867, when the British North America Act became law. The Statute of 1853 was entitled "An Act to enlarge the Representation of the People of this Province in Parliament," but it also effected an extensive redistribution of seats in the Assembly. It is worthy of note that in the same session a statute was passed extending the electoral franchise and providing a new system of registration of votes.

¹² See pp. 136-139.

¹³ The first Parliament of Canada under the Union Act met at Kingston in 1841, but the place of meeting was changed to Montreal, where the second Parliament held its first session in 1844, in accordance with the expressed will of its predecessor. After the burning of the Parliament buildings in 1849 the Legislature resolved to meet alternately in Toronto and Quebec, and actually did so until the seat of Government became permanently fixed at Ottawa, as the result of the decision of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, to whom the question had been referred by Parliament for arbitration. This decision was given in 1858, and in 1866 the Provincial Parliament met for the first and last time in Ottawa. For the reasons which led to the abandonment of Montreal see Walrond's "Letters and Journals of Lord Elgin," pp. 80-94. The fiction of allowing the Governor to choose the place of meeting of Parliament was kept up to the last under the Union Act (see proclamation naming Ottawa, Journals of Legislative Assembly for 1866, p. v.), but it was abolished by the Confederation Act, section 16, which fixed the seat of Government of Canada at Ottawa, subject to the Queen's pleasure.

¹⁴ The first Parliament met on the 14th of June, four months and four days after the union took effect. See Note 3.

¹⁶ During the session in which the Union Act was passed the Imperial Parliament passed an Act (3 & 4 Vict., cap. 78) dealing with the clergy reserves. Another Imperial Act, and the last (16 & 17 Vict., cap. 21), was passed in 1853, "to authorize the Legislature of the Province of Canada to make provision concerning the clergy reserves in that Province, and the proceeds thereof." Under the authority conferred by the latter statute and by the Union Act, the clergy reserves were secularized in 1854 by Act of the Canadian Parliament (18 Vict., cap. 2).

¹⁷ The right of the Governor to endow rectories under the authority of the Constitutional Act, 1791, was taken away by Act of the Canadian Parliament (14 & 15 Vict., cap. 175) passed in 1851 and entitled "An Act respecting Rectories." This Act expressly left the legality of existing endowments to be settled by the courts of law, and a test case was submitted to the Court of Chancery in 1852. See note 14 to the "Constitutional Act and Supplementary Acts" (p. 147).

¹⁸ See pp. 104-105.

¹⁹ The name given to the Legislatures of Massachusetts and Connecticut.

²⁰ See note 19 to the "Constitutional Act and Supplementary Acts" (p. 147).

²¹ Under the authority of 1 & 2 William IV., cap. 23. See pp. 106-107 above.

²² A motion was made in the House of Commons by Mr. Hume to cut down this amount to £25,000, and Viscount Howick suggested that the salary of the Governor should not be a charge on the revenues of the colony. Neither of these proposals was entertained by the House.

²³ For the condition of Upper and Lower Canada, in the matter of municipal institutions at this date, see Lord Durham's report. The first municipal system, as that term is now used in this country, was created for Upper Canada in 1841 by Act of the first Parliament (4 & 5 Vict., cap. 10). Lord Sydenham took a warm interest in the measure, and was largely instrumental in securing its enactment. He had previously induced the Special Council of Lower Canada to establish a similar system in that Province, deeming it unlikely that the Legislature of the United Province would do so. See "Life of Lord Sydenham," by Poulett Scrope, pp. 176, 200-205, 246, 252-251. See also Sir Francis Hincks' "Reminiscences," pp. 63-68.

²⁶ The only other Act of the same session dealing with Canadian affairs is the Clergy Reserve Act (3 & 4 Vict., cap. 78).

²⁸ The removal of the restriction imposed by the Union Act was announced to the Canadian Parliament on the 18th of January, 1849, in a speech from the Throne, delivered by Lord Elgin, who warmly sympathized with the policy of allowing the French language to be reinstated. See Walrond's "Letters and Journals of Lord Elgin," pp. 54-57.

²⁹ This Act is 17 & 18 Vict., cap. 118. The text is reprinted from the Imperial "Statutes at Large," London, 1855. It was passed in compliance with an address to the Queen from the Legislative Assembly of Canada, adopted, after a protracted debate and many divisions, on the second of June, 1853. See Journals of the Legislative Assembly of the session of 1852-53, pp. 197, and 922-946. For interesting debates on the Act at various stages of its progress, especially in the House of Lords, see "Hansard's Parliamentary Debates," Third Series, vol. 134, pp. 159, 501, 822, and vol. 135, p. 1319.

shall be and be deemed to have been valid and effectual for all purposes whatsoever from the date at which they respectively received the assent, in the Queen's name, of the Governor General of the said Dominion of Canada.

Limitation of powers of Parliament of Canada to legislate for an established Province.

6. Except as provided by the third section of this Act, it shall not be competent for the Parliament of Canada to alter the provisions of the last mentioned Act of the said Parliament in so far as it relates to the Province of Manitoba, or of any other Act hereafter establishing new Provinces in the said Dominion, subject always to the right of the Legislature of the Province of Manitoba to alter from time to time the provisions of any law respecting the qualification of electors and members of the Legislative Assembly, and to make laws respecting elections in the said Province.

An Act⁷⁹ respecting the Representation in the Parliament of Canada of Territories which for the time being form part of the Dominion of Canada, but are not included in any Province.

NOTES TO THE CONFEDERATION ACT.

¹ This Act is reprinted from the collection of "Public General Statutes" issued with the "Law Reports," Vol. II, London, 1867. The text has been carefully compared with that found in the collection of "Public General Acts" issued by the Queen's Printers, London, 1867, and also with that found in the "Statutes at Large," London, 1868. The only difference amongst these various editions is in the marginal notes, and as the first two agree, they have been here followed. The Act is 30 Vict. cap. 3 in the "Law Reports," and also in the "Public General Statutes"; it is 30 & 31 Vict. cap 3 in the "Statutes at Large". In the official reprints of the Act, prefixed or appended to the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Manitoba, the notation of the "Statutes at Large" has been followed. For a full report of the debates on the measure in its progress through the Imperial Parliament see "Hansard's Parliamentary Debates," third series, vol. 185, pp. 557, 804, 1011, 1164, and 1310. The ordinary Canadian histories give a sufficiently detailed narrative of the events which led to the confederation of the leading Provinces of British North America. For a full and valuable account of the Quebec conference of 1864, see "Confederation of Canada," (Vol. I.; Toronto, 1872) by Hon. John Hamilton Gray, one of the delegates representing New Brunswick. The debates in the Canadian Parliament, in the session of 1865, on the motion to adopt the "Quebec Resolutions," were printed in a single volume under the title of "Parliamentary Debates on the subject of the Confederation of the British North American Provinces." (Quebec, 1865). This collection of speeches by the foremost statesmen of Canada, is indispensable to the student of this part of Canadian constitutional history. For the text of the Quebec Resolutions see Appendix F. *

² In Canada and Nova Scotia the question was never submitted to popular vote. In New Brunswick a general election was held to decide the matter.

³ Prof. Dicey in his "Introduction to the Law of the Constitution" (Chapter III, p. 155 of the third edition) says: "The preamble to the British North America Act, 1867, asserts with official mendacity that the Provinces of the present Dominion have expressed their desire to be united into one Dominion 'with a constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom.' If preambles were intended to express the truth, for the word 'Kingdom' ought to have been substituted 'States,' since it is clear that the constitution of the Dominion is modelled on that of the Union." For a useful comparison between the constitution of Canada and that of the United States see Dr. Bourinot's "Canada and the United States" (Transactions of the "Royal Society of Canada" for 1890), and his paper under the same title in the Scottish Review for July, 1890. ⁴ See Sections 146 and 147 of this Act.

⁵ By Royal Proclamation, issued from Windsor Castle on the twenty-second of May, 1867, the first of July following was declared to be the day on which the Confederation Act should go into operation. Lord Monck, the last Governor-General of the Province of Canada under the Union Act of 1840, was appointed the first Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada under the Confederation Act of 1867, and on the first of July of that year he announced his appointment to the people of Canada by proclamation. The texts of these two documents are prefixed to the Journals of the first session (1867-68) of the House of Commons of Canada.

¹¹ Section 18 of "The British North America Act, 1867," was repealed by "The Parliament of Canada Act, 1875," and a new section substituted (see p. 227).

¹² The first Parliament of the Dominion of Canada met on the 7th of November, 1867.

¹³ For the duration of Parliament see section 50.

Court of the Dominion (3 Can. Sup. Court Reports; Cartwright's Cases, Vol. I, p. 167), and afterwards affirmed by the Privy Council (5 Appeal Cases, 159). The trial of controverted elections to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario was transferred to the Provincial Superior Courts by Ontario Statute, 34 Vict. cap. 3.

²⁰ The office of Deputy Speaker was created in 1885 by Dom. Stat. 48 & 49 Vict. cap. 1.

²⁹ The seat of Government of Manitoba is Winnipeg; of British Columbia, Victoria; of Prince Edward Island, Charlottetown; and of the Northwest Territory, Regina.

³⁰ Of the four Provinces which entered into Confederation in 1867, Ontario alone had only one legislative chamber. Quebec was provided with two under section 71 of this Act, and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick retained each the two it had. Of the other Provinces which now form part of the Dominion Prince Edward Island retains the two chambers which it had before its admission; Manitoba was provided with a second chamber by the Dominion Statute (33 Vic. cap. 3), which created the Province; but it was abolished by Act of the Manitoba Legislature (39 Vict. cap. 28). British Columbia occupied at the time of its admission into the Dominion a peculiar position. From 1849 to 1859 Vancouver Island was placed under the control of the Hudson Bay Company, the Governor of the colony being appointed by the British Government. The first Governor, Mr. Blanshard, appointed a legislative council of three members, and in 1856 his successor, Governor Douglass, by direction of the Secretary for the colonies, Mr. Labouchere, gave the people an opportunity of electing their first Parliament, which was made up of seven members. These two chambers continued till the union of Vancouver Island with British Columbia in 1866, the Legislative Council having been in 1868 made partly elective. The original Province of British Columbia, which was under the same Governor with Vancouver Island from 1858 to 1864, was in the latter year granted a separate establishment, consisting of a Governor and an appointed Legislative Council. The expense of this arrangement brought about a union in 1866 under a government similar in form to that of British Columbia, namely, a Governor and an appointed Council, and this was replaced in 1871 by a constitution similar to that of Ontario, with a view to the admission of the Province into the Dominion. The statute or ordinance making this change is No. 147 in the "Laws of British Columbia (Revised), 1871." See also Macfie's "Vancouver Island and British Columbia," chap. xiii, (London, 1866). The present constitution of British Columbia is contained in chap. 22 of the "Consolidated Acts, 1888."

³¹ The representation in the Ontario Legislative Assembly was re-adjusted in 1874 by the statute 38 Vict. cap. 2, which increased the membership to 88. It was again re-adjusted in 1885 by the statute 48 Vict. cap. 2, which increased the membership to 90. By 52 Vict., cap. 2, the number was increased to 91.

³² No change has been made by the Quebec Legislature in this part of the Provincial constitution.

³⁶ The Legislature of each of these Provinces met for the first time on the 27th of December, 1867.

³⁸ The following statutes embody the law of Ontario in relation to the matters specified in this section: As to the qualification of members of the Legislative Assembly, R. S. O., 1897, cap. 9, s. 3; as to disqualification of members, ibid cap. 2, ss. 6-14; as to qualification of voters at legislative elections, 51 Vict., cap. 4 (the Manhood Suffrage Act); as to all proceedings at elections, R. S. O., 1897, cap. 9; as to the trial of controverted elections, R. S. O., 1897, cap. 10; as to vacancies, R. S. O., 1897, cap. 11. The following statutes embody the law of Quebec on the same points: As to eligibility and disqualification of members of the Legislative Assembly, R. S. Q., 1898, articles 95-99; as to the qualification of voters, 52 Vict., cap. 4; as to proceedings at elections, R. S. Q., 1898, cap. 2; as to controverted elections, R. S. Q., 1898, cap. 3; and as to vacancies, R. S. Q., 1898, articles 100-108. The Ontario Legislature by the Statute 42 Vict. cap. 4, subsequently amended by 48 Vict. cap. 2, fixed more definitely the limits of the four-year term. By the Statute 44-45 Vict. cap. 7, the Quebec Legislature extended the term to five years for that Province.

⁴⁰ See the case of Leprohon v. City of Ottawa (Cartwright I., 592).

⁴¹ As to the nature of the control here vested in the Dominion Government over inland fisheries, see the case of Queen v. Robertson (Cartwright II., 65).

⁴² See the decision given by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Smiles v. Belford (Cartwright, I., 576).

⁴⁵ A number of judicial decisions have been given to determine the signification of the term "municipal institutions," including many of the so-called "liquor" cases. See amongst others Leprohon v. City of Ottawa (Cartwright, I., 592), Slavin v. Orillia (Cartwright, I., 688), Harris v. City of Hamilton (Cartwright, I., 756), Three Rivers v. Sulte (Cartwright, II., 230), Ex parte Pillow (Cartwright, III., 357), Windsor v. Commercial Bank (Cartwright, III., 377), and Hodge v. the Queen (Cartwright, III., 144).

⁴⁷ For interpretative decisions see the following cases: Bourgoin v. The Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental R.R. (Cartwright, I., 233), Credit Valley R.R. v. G. W. R.R. (I., 822), Macdougall v. Union Navigation Co. (I., 238), Regina v. Mohr (II., 257), Monkhouse v. Grand Trunk R.R. (III., 239). See also Dom. Statute 46, Vict., cap. 24, s. 6, and Revised Statutes of Canada, 1883, cap. 103, s. 121.

⁴⁸ Many decisions have been given by the Courts involving a definition of this phrase, amongst others the following, all of which will be found in Cartwright's collection: Cushing v. Dupuy (I., 252), Citizens and Queen Insurance Companies v. Parsons (I., 265), Dobie v. Temporalities Board (I., 351), Re Goodhue (I., 560), Crombie v. Jackson (II., 685), Jones v. Canada Central R.R. Co. (I., 777), Smith v. Merchants Bank (I., 838), The Queen v. Robertson (II., 65), McClanaghan v. St. Anne's Mutual Building Society (II., 237), Cleveland v. Melbourne and Brompton Gore (II., 241), Bennett v. The Pharmaceutical Association of Quebec (II., 250), Loranger v. Colonial Building and Investment Association (III., 118), Re Windsor and Annapolis R.R. (III., 387).

⁵¹ Such an appeal was made by Roman Catholic inhabitants of New Brunswick against the School Act passed by the Legislature of that Province in 1871. The Governor-General-in-Council decided that there was no ground for interference, and the statute went into operation. See Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies," pp. 346-350; and Dom. Sess. papers, 1877, No. 89. A similar appeal was made by Roman Catholic inhabitants of Prince Edward Island against the School Act passed by the Legislature of that Province in 1877, with a similar result. In 1890 the Legislature of Manitoba passed two Acts (chapters 37 and 38 of 53 Victoria), the former abolishing the dual Board of Education and the dual Superintendency of Public Instruction, the latter creating a single public school system instead of the dual system which had up to that time existed by law.

⁵² The Parliament of Canada was appealed to in the New Brunswick case (see note 51), but no remedial legislation was granted. See Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies," pp. 346-350, and Dom. Sess. Papers, 1874, No. 25.

⁵³ Nothing has been done to bring about the uniformity here provided for.

⁵⁵ For proceedings taken in the House of Commons under this section, but not carried so far as to secure the removal of the judge who was assailed, see the case of Judge Lafontaine of Quebec (Commons Journals of 1867-68, pp. 297, 344 and 396; and of 1869, pp. 135 and 247); the case of Judge Loranger of Quebec (Commons Journals of 1877, pp. 20, 25, 36, 258, and Appendix No. 3); and the case of Chief Justice Wood of Manitoba, (Common Journals of 1882, pp. 176, 192, 355; Sessional Papers of 1882, No. 106; and "Debates of the House of Commons," pp. 1234-1237).

⁵⁸ In the first session of the Dominion Parliament a bill was passed "to fix the salary of the Governor-General," and by it the £10,000 was reduced to £6,500. It was reserved "for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure," and the message withholding her assent is printed as No. 73 of the Sessional Papers of 1869.

⁵⁹ Including lands acquired by treaty from Indian tribes subsequent to Confederation. See the case of the St. Catharines Milling and Lumber Co. v. the Queen, (English Appeal Reports, vol. xiv., p. 46.)

⁶¹ This financial settlement has been several times disturbed. "Better terms" were conceded to Nova Scotia in 1869 (Dom. Statutes, 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 3). In 1873 an Act was passed (36 Vict. cap. 30), to readjust the amounts of the Provincial debts for which the Dominion became liable, and an Act was passed the following year (37 Vict. cap. 3), confirming the "better terms" settlement made with Nova Scotia in 1869. An Act was passed in 1884 (47 Vict. cap. 53) "to re-adjust the yearly subsidies allowed by Canada to the several Provinces." In 1885 an Act (48 & 49 Vict. cap. 4) was passed authorizing the Governor-in-Council to make advances to Provinces on certain conditions. The laws relating to subsidies were consolidated in the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1886, cap. 46. The Province of Manitoba was created in 1870, with certain financial arrangements (33 Vict. cap. 3, sec. 25). These arrangements were re-adjusted by 45 Vict. cap. 5, and again by 48 & 49 Vict. cap. 50; and the latter statute was "explained" by 49 Vict. cap. 8. For the financial terms on which Prince Edward Island was admitted into Canada see the Address to the Queen adopted by the Dominion Parliament in 1873 (Com. Journals, vol. vi. p. 403). In 1887 an Act (50 & 51 Vict. cap. 8) was passed to increase the subsidy to that Province. The financial arrangements made with British Columbia on her entrance into the Dominion are contained in the address to the Queen in the Commons Journals for 1871, p. 194.

⁶⁶ The Ontario Legislature in 1872 authorized the increase of the Executive Council to six members (35 Vict. cap. 3, sec. 6), but did not add to the number of executive departments till 1876, when the office of Minister of Education was created (39 Vict., cap. 16). In 1888 the limitation to six was removed, and the Department of Agriculture was placed in charge of a "Minister" (51 Vict. cap. 8). In Quebec the membership of the Executive Council is fixed by the Revised Statutes of 1888 (sec. 593), as follows: President of Council, Attorney-General, Provincial Secretary, Provincial Treasurer, Commissioner of Crown Lands, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Commissioner of Public Works.

⁶⁸ For proceedings of the House of Commons in connection with the adoption of the address for the admission of British Columbia, and for the text of the address itself see Com. Jour. for 1871, pp. 182-203. The Order of Her Majesty in Council declaring the union of Canada and British Columbia will be found on pp. lxxxiv-cvii of the Statutes of Canada for 1872. The proceedings of the House of Commons in connection with the admission of Prince Edward Island are given on pp. 401-405 of Com. Jour. for 1873, and the Imperial Order-in-Council on pp. ix-xxiii of the Statutes of Canada for the same year.

⁷¹ As to the nature of these "assets," and the manner in which they have been finally disposed of, as between Ontario and Quebec, see Ontario Sessional Papers of 1873, Nos. 27 and 37; and of 1878, No. 42.

⁷⁵ Such provision is made by Chapters 50-54 of the Rev. Stat. Can. 1886. Amongst previous enactments are the following: 38 Vict. cap. 49; 39 Vict. cap. 21; 41 Vict. cap. 15; 47 Vict. cap. 23; 48 & 49 Vict. cap. 51; 49 Vict. cap. 25.

⁷⁷ The "doubts" here mentioned seem to have arisen chiefly in the Senate (Com. Journals, 1873, second session, p. 6). See Ibid., pp. 7-10, for the opinions of Lord Dufferin, Sir John Macdonald, Alpheus Todd, and the Law Officers of the Crown.

⁷⁹ This Act is 49 & 50 Vict., cap. 35. The text is reprinted from "The Public General Statutes," issued with "The Law Reports," London, 1886. As to the necessity of this statute see sections 2 and 5 of the "British North America Act, 1871," pp. 225-226 above.

⁸⁰ The Act passed by the Dominion Parliament giving representation therein to the North-West Territories (Can. Stat. 49 Vict., cap. 24), was assented to by the Governor-General on the 2nd of June, 1886. See date of assent to this Act above.

COLONIAL HABEAS CORPUS ACT, 1862.

An Act¹ respecting the issue of Writs of Habeas Corpus out of England into Her Majesty's Possessions abroad.

[16TH MAY, 1862.]

WHEREAS it is expedient that writs of Habeas Corpus should not issue out of England into any colony or foreign dominion of the Crown, where Her Majesty has a lawfully established court or courts of justice having authority to grant and issue the said writ, and to ensure the due execution thereof throughout such colony or foreign dominion :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

Writ not to issue into Colony, &c., having Court authorized to grant same. 1. No writ of Habeas Corpus shall issue out of England, by authority of any judge or court of justice therein, into any colony or foreign dominion of the Crown, where Her Majesty has a lawfully established court or courts of justice having authority to grant and issue the said writ, and to ensure the due execution thereof throughout such colony or dominion.

Not to affect right of appeal. 2. Provided, that nothing in this Act contained shall affect or interfere with any right of appeal to Her Majesty in Council now by law existing.

COLONIAL LAWS VALIDITY ACT, 1865.

An Act¹ to remove Doubts as to the Validity of Colonial Laws.

[29TH JUNE, 1865.

WHEREAS doubts have been entertained respecting the validity of divers laws² enacted, or purporting to be enacted by the Legislatures of certain of Her Majesty's Colonies, and respecting the powers of such Legislatures; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed :

Be it hereby enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

1. The term "colony"³ shall in this Act include all of Definitions: Her Majesty's Possessions abroad, in which there shall "Colony." exist a legislature as hereinafter defined, except the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and such territories as may for the time being be vested in Her Majesty, under or by virtue of any Act of Parliament for the government of India ;

when to extend is made applicable to such colony by the express words or to Colony: necessary intendment of any Act of Parliament;

Colonial Law when not void for repugnancy. 3. No colonial law shall be, or be deemed to have been, void or inoperative on the ground of repugnancy to the law of England, unless the same shall be repugnant to the provisions of some such Act of Parliament, order, or regulation, as aforesaid.

Colonial Law not void for inconsistency with instructions. 4. No colonial law, passed with the concurrence of or assented to by the Governor of any colony, or to be hereafter so passed or assented to, shall be, or be deemed to have been, void or inoperative by reason only of any instructions with reference to such law, or the subject thereof, which may have been given to such Governor, by or on behalf of Her Majesty, by any instrument other than the letters patent or instrument authorizing such Governor to concur in passing or to assent to laws for the peace, order, and good government of such colony, even though such instructions may be referred to in such letters patent, or last-mentioned instrument.

Colonial Legislatures may establish, &c., Courts of law. 5 Every colonial Legislature shall have, and be deemed at all times to have had, full power within its jurisdiction to establish courts of judicature, and to abolish and reconstitute the same, and to alter the constitution thereof, and to make provision for the administration of justice therein⁵; and every representative Legislature shall, in respect to the colony under its jurisdiction, have, and be deemed at all times to have had, full power to make laws respecting the constitution, powers, and procedure of such Legislature; provided that such laws shall have been passed in such manner and form as may from time to time be required, by any Act of Parliament, letters patent, Order in Council, or colonial law for the time being in force in the colony.

6. The certificate of the clerk or other proper officer of a legislative body in any colony to the effect that the document to which it is attached is a true copy of any colonial law assented to by the Governor of such colony, or of any bill reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure by the said Governor, shall be prima facie evidence that the document so certified is a true copy of such law or bill, and, as the case may be, that such law has been duly and properly passed and assented to, or that such bill has been duly and properly passed and presented to the Governor; and any proclamation, purporting to be published by authority of the Governor, in any newspaper in the colony to which such law or bill shall relate, and signifying Her Majesty's disallowance of any such colonial law, or Her Majesty's assent to any such reserved bill as aforesaid, shall be prima facie evidence of such disallowance or assent.

NOTES TO THE COLONIAL LAWS VALIDITY ACT, 1865.

² Amongst the "laws," the validity of which was questioned, were "divers Acts" passed by the Legislature of South Australia "for the purpose of altering the constitution of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly," of that colony (see section 7 below), and with a view to set at rest the doubts that had been raised the British Parliament passed an Act (26 & 27 Vict. cap. 84) "to confirm certain Acts of Colonial Legislatures," thus making it general in its operation. The text of this statute is obviously a prelude to the "Colonial Laws Validity Act." It is as follows:—

1 "In this Act of Parliament the term 'Colonial Legislature' shall mean the authority (other than Her Majesty-in-Council) competent to make laws for any of Her Majesty's possessions abroad, except India, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man. The term 'Governor' shall mean the officer lawfully administering the Government of any colony.

2 All laws heretofore passed or purporting to have been passed by any colonial Legislature with the object of declaring or altering the constitution of such Legislature, or of any branch thereof, or the mode of appointing or electing the members of [the same, shall have, and be deemed to have had, from the date at which the same shall have received the assent of Her Majesty or of the Governor of the colony on behalf of Her Majesty, the same force and effect for all purposes whatever as if the said Legislature had possessed full powers of enacting laws for the objects aforesaid, and as if all formalities and conditions by Act of Parliament or otherwise prescribed in respect of the passing of such laws had been duly observed."

³ See Tarring's "Chapters on the Laws relating to the Colonies" (pp. 1-2) for a legal definition of the term "colony."

⁴ See Note 78, p. 239, for an illustration of the nullification of a Canadian Statute pro tanto on the ground of "repugnancy." The Acts passed for the regulation of copyright in Canada afford other illustrations of the operation of the same principle. The Imperial Copyright Act of 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. cap. 45) is made applicable to "all the colonies, settlements, and possessions of the Crown, which now are, or hereafter may be acquired." In 1872 the Canadian Parliament passed a Copyright Bill, to which, after it had been reserved for Her Majesty's pleasure, her assent was refused on the ground that some of its provisions conflicted with those of the Imperial Copyright Act. See Dom. Sess. Papers, 1875, No. 28. The Canadian Parliament in 1875 passed a Copyright Act which would also have been nullified on the ground of "repugnancy," had it been assented to in the usual way; but the Imperial Parliament in the same year passed an Act (38 & 39 Vict. cap. 53) authorizing Her Majesty to give assent by Order-in-Council, which was subsequently done. In the case of Smiles v. Belford, (Ont. Chancery Reports, vol. 23, pp. 590-605; Ont. Appeal Reports, 1876-77, pp. 436-445), it was decided that the Canadian Act of 1875 did not impair the British author's right under the Imperial Act of 1842.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S COMMISSIONS AND ROYAL INSTRUCTIONS.¹

I. Commission and Instructions² of Viscount Monck, 1867.

Draft of a Commission to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, appointing Viscount Monck to be Governor-General of Canada, on and after the first day of July, 1867.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, to our Right Trusty and Well-beloved Cousin, Charles Stanley, Viscount Monck,—GREETING :

And whereas We did, on the twenty-second day of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council, declare by Proclamation⁵ that, on and after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, being within six months after the passing of the said Act, the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, should form and be One Dominion, under the name of Canada :

Now know You, that We do by these Presents declare Our pleasure to be, that the said recited Letters Patent, and every clause, article and thing therein contained, shall be, and they are hereby declared to be Revoked and Determined, on the said first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven :

And further Know You, that We, reposing especial Trust and Confidence in the prudence, courage and loyalty of you, the said Charles Stanley, Viscount Monck, of Our special Grace, certain knowledge and mere motion, have thought fit to constitute and appoint, and do by these Presents constitute and appoint you to be, on and after the said first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, during Our pleasure, Our Governor General of Canada ; and We do hereby authorize, empower, require and command you thereafter, in due manner to do and execute all things that shall belong to your said Command and the Trust We have reposed in you, according to the several powers, provisions, and directions granted or appointed you by virtue of this Our Commission, and of the said recited Act of Parliament, and according to such instructions as are herewith given to you,⁶ or which may from time to time hereafter be given to you, in respect of the said Dominion of Canada, under Our Sign Manual and Signet, or by Our Order in Our Privy Council, or by Us, through one of Our principal Secretaries of State, and according to such laws as are or shall be in force within Our said Dominion.

II. And We do hereby authorize and empower you to keep and use the Great Seal of Canada, for the sealing of all things whatsoever that shall pass the said Seal.

III. And We do further authorize and empower you to exercise all such powers as We may be at any time entitled to exercise, in respect of the constitution and appointment of Judges ; and, in cases requisite, Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, Justices of the Peace, and other necessary Officers and Ministers of Our said Dominion of Canada, for the better administration of Justice, and putting the Laws into execution.⁷

IV. And We do hereby give and grant unto you, so far as We lawfully may, full power and authority, upon sufficient cause to you appearing, to remove from his Office, or to suspend from the exercise of the same, any person exercising any office or place within Our said Dominion, under or by virtue of any Commission or Warrant granted, or which may be granted by Us, in Our name or under Our authority.

V. And We do hereby give and grant unto you full power and authority, when you shall see cause, in Our name and on Our behalf, to grant to any offender convicted of any crime in any Court, or before any Judge, Justice or Magistrate within Our said Dominion, a Pardon, either free or subject to lawful conditions, or any respite of the execution of the sentence of any such offender, for such period as to you may seem fit; and to remit any fines, penalties or forfeitures, which may become due and payable to Us.^s

VI. And We do hereby authorize you to exercise, from time to time, as you may judge necessary, all powers belonging to Us, in respect of Assembling or Proroguing the Senate or the House of Commons of Our said Dominion, and of Dissolving the said House of Commons; and We do hereby give the like authority to the several Lieutenant Governors for the time being, of the Four Provinces in Our said Dominion, with respect to the Legislative Councils or the Legislative or General Assemblies of those Provinces respectively.

VII. And We do by these Presents authorize and empower you, within our said Dominion, to exercise all such powers as We may be entitled to exercise therein, in respect of granting Licenses for Marriages, Letters of Administration and Probates of Wills, and with respect to the custody and management of Idiots and Lunatics, and their Estates; and to Present any person or persons to any Churches, Chapels or other Ecclesiastical Benefices, within Our said Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, to which We shall from time to time be entitled to Present.

VIII. And whereas, by the said recited Act, it is amongst other things enacted, that it shall be lawful for Us, if We think fit, to authorize the Governor General of Canada to appoint any person or persons jointly or severally to be his Deputy or Deputies within any part or parts of Canada, and in that capacity to exercise, during the pleasure of the Governor General, such of the powers, authorities and functions of the Governor General as he may deem it necessary or expedient to assign to him or them, subject to any limitations or directions from time to time expressed or given by Us; now We do hereby authorize and empower you, subject to such limitations and directions as aforesaid, to appoint any person or persons jointly or severally, to be your Deputy or Deputies within any part or parts of Our Dominion of Canada, and in that capacity to exercise, during your pleasure, such of your powers, functions and authorities as you may deem it necessary or expedient to assign to him or them : Provided always, that the appointment of such a Deputy or Deputies shall not affect the exercise of any such power, authority, or function by you, the said Charles Stanley, Viscount Monck, in person.

IX. And in case of your death, incapacity, or absence out of Our said Dominion of Canada, We do by these Presents give and grant, all and singular, the powers and authorities herein to you granted to Our Lieutenant Governor for the time being of Our said Dominion of Canada, or in the absence of any such Lieutenant Governor to such person as we may by Warrant under Our Sign Manual and Signet, appoint to be the Administrator of the Government of Our said Dominion, or in the absence of any such Lieutenant Governor or person as aforesaid, to the senior Military Officer for the time being in command of Our regular forces in our said Dominion, such powers and authorities to be by him executed and enjoyed during Our pleasure.

X. And We do hereby require and command all Our Officers and Ministers, civil and military, and all other the inhabitants of Our said Dominion of Canada, to be obedient, aiding, and assisting unto you in the execution of this Our Commission, and of the powers and authorities herein contained.

Draft of Instructions to be passed under the Royal Sign Manual and Signet to Viscount Monck, Governor-General of Canada.

INSTRUCTIONS to Our Right Trusty and Well-beloved Cousin, Charles Stanley, Viscount Monck, Our Governor-General of Canada, or, in his absence, to Our Lieutenant-Governor or the Officer Administering the Government of Our Dominion of Canada for the time being. Given at Our Court at Balmoral, this First day of June, 1867, in the Thirtieth Year of Our Reign.

I. Whereas, by Our Commission, under the Great Seal of Our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing even date herewith, We have constituted and appointed you, the said Charles Stanley, Viscount Monck, to be, on and after the first day of July, 1867, during Our pleasure, Our Governor General of Canada : And have required you to do and execute all things that shall belong to your said command, according to the several powers, provisions, directions, and instructions therein mentioned, and particularly according to such instructions as should be therewith given to you :

Now, therefore, by these Our instructions, under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, being the said last-mentioned instructions, We do declare Our will and pleasure to be, that on or immediately after the said First day of July, 1867, you do publish Our said Commission in Our Dominion of Canada, and do take the Oath⁹ appointed to be taken by an Act passed in the Twenty-first and Twenty-second Year of Our Reign, intituled, "An Act to substitute one Oath for the Oaths of Allegiance, Supremacy, and Abjuration, and for the relief of Her Majesty's subjects professing the Jewish religion"; and likewise that you take the usual Oath for the due execution and performance of the Office and Trust of Our Governor-General of Our said Dominion, and for the due and impartial Administration of Justice; which said Oaths the Judges of Our Supreme Courts of Record within our said Dominion, or any three or more of such Judges, have hereby full power and authority, and are required to tender and administer unto you.

II. And We do hereby give and grant unto you full power and authority from time to time, and at any time hereafter, by yourself or by any other person to be authorized by you in that behalf, to administer to all and every person or persons as you shall think fit, who shall hold any office or place of trust or profit, or who shall at any time or times pass into Our said Dominion of Canada, or who shall be resident or abiding therein, the Oath commonly called the Oath of Allegiance, together with such other Oath or Oaths as may from time to time be prescribed by any Laws or Statutes in that behalf made and provided.

III. And to the end that Our Privy Council¹⁰ for Canada may be assisting to you in all affairs relating to Our Service, you are to communicate to them these Our Instructions, and any additional instructions which may be in like manner hereafter given to you by Us.

IV. And We do hereby declare, and it is Our Pleasure, that Our said Privy Council shall not proceed to the despatch of business unless duly summoned by your authority, nor unless four Members of the said Council be present and assisting at the meetings at which any such business shall be despatched. And We do further direct, that if, in any case you see sufficient cause to dissent from the opinion of the major part or of the whole of Our said Privy Council so present, it shall be competent to you to execute the powers and authorities vested in you by Our said Commission, and by these Our Instructions, in opposition to such their opinion¹¹; it being, nevertheless, Our Pleasure, that in every case it shall be competent to any Member of Our said Privy Council to record at length, on the Minutes of Our said Council, the grounds and reasons of any advice or opinion he may give upon any question brought under the consideration of such Council.

V. And it is Our Pleasure and you are hereby authorized to appoint by an instrument under the Great Seal of Canada, one Member of our said Privy Council to preside in your absence, and to remove him and appoint another in his stead. And if, during your absence, the Member so appointed shall also be absent, then the senior Member of the Privy Council, actually present shall preside, the seniority of the Members of the said Council being regulated according to the date or order of their respective appointment thereto.

VI. And We do further direct and command that a full and exact Journal or Minute be kept of all the Deliberations, Acts, Proceedings, Votes, and Resolutions of Our said Privy Council; and that at each Meeting of the said Council the Minutes of the last preceding Meeting shall be read over, confirmed, or amended, as the case may require before proceeding to the despatch of any other business.

- VII. And for the execution of so much of the Powers vested in you by virtue of the "British North America Act, 1867," as relates to the declaring either that you Assent in Our Name to Bills passed by the Houses of the Parliament, or that you withhold Our Assent therefrom, or that you Reserve such Bills for the signification of Our pleasure thereon, it is Our Will and Pleasure that when any Bill is presented to you for Our Assent of either of the classes hereinafter specified, you shall (unless you shall think proper to withhold Our Assent from the same) Reserve the same for the signification of Our pleasure thereon; Subject, nevertheless, to your discretion, in case you should be of opinion that an Urgent Necessity exists, requiring that such Bill be brought into immediate operation; in which case you are Authorized to Assent to such Bill in Our Name, transmitting to Us by the earliest opportunity the Bill so Assented to, together with your reasons for assenting thereto; that is to say:

1. Any Bill for the Divorce of Persons joined together in Holy Matrimony.

2. Any Bill whereby any Grant of Land or Money, or other Donation or Gratuity, may be made to yourself.

3. Any Bill whereby any Paper or other Currency may be made a Legal Tender, except the Coin of the Realm, or other Gold or Silver Coin.

4. Any Bill imposing Differential Duties.

5. Any Bill, the Provisions of which shall appear inconsistent with obligations imposed upon Us by Treaty.

6. Any Bill interfering with the discipline or control of Our Forces in Our said Dominion by land and sea.

7. Any Bill of an extraordinary nature and importance, whereby Our Prerogative, or the rights and property of Our subjects not residing in Our said Dominion, or the trade and shipping of the United Kingdom and its dependencies, may be prejudiced.

8. Any Bill containing provisions to which Our Assent has been once refused, or which has been disallowed by Us.

VIII. You shall take care that all laws assented to by you in Our name, or reserved for the signification of Our pleasure thereon, be duly transmitted to Us with such explanatory observations as the nature of each law may require, and you are also to transmit fair Copies of the Journals and Minutes of the Proceedings of the said Houses of the Parliament, which you are to require from the Clerks or other proper Officers in that behalf of the said Houses of the Parliament.

IX. And whereas We have by Our said Commission given and granted unto you full power and authority, when you shall see cause, to pardon offenders convicted of any crime, and to remit Fines, Penalties, and Forfeitures; Now We do hereby enjoin you to call upon the Judge presiding at the trial of any offenders to make to you a written report of the cases of all persons who may from time to time be condemned to suffer death by the sentence of any Court within Our said Dominion, and such reports of the said Judge shall by you be taken into consideration at the first meeting thereafter which may be conveniently held of Our said Privy Council for Canada; and you shall not pardon any such offender unless it shall appear to you expedient so to do, upon receiving the advice of Our said Privy Council therein, but in all such cases you are to decide whether to extend or withhold a pardon, according to your own deliberate judgment whether the Members of Our said Privy Council concur therein, or otherwise; Entering, nevertheless, on the Minutes of the said Council, a Minute of your reasons at length, in case you should decide any such question in opposition to the judgment of the majority of Members thereof.¹²

X. It is Our further will and pleasure that all commissions to be granted by you to any person or persons to be Judge, Justice of the Peace, or other necessary Officer, unless otherwise provided by law, be granted during Our pleasure only.

XI. And whereas by Our said Commission We have authorized you to present any person or persons to any Church, Chapel, or other Ecclesiastical Benefice, within our said Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, to which We may from time to time be entitled to present, We do declare Our will and pleasure to be that you do not present any Minister of the United Church of England and Ireland to any Ecclesiastical Benefice without a Certificate from the Bishop for the time being of the Diocese in which such presentation is made, or his Commissary, of his being conformable to the doctrine and discipline of the said Church. And it is Our will and pleasure that the person so presented shall be instituted by the said Bishop, or his Commissary duly authorized by him.

XII. And whereas you will receive through one of Our principal Secretaries of State a Book of Tables in blank (commonly called the "Blue Book") to be annually filled up with certain Returns relative to the Revenue and Expenditure, Militia, Public Works, Legislation, Civil Establishment, Pensions, Populations, Schools, Course of Exchange, Imports and Exports, Agricultural Produce, Manufactures, and other matters in the said "Blue Book" more particularly specified, with reference to the state and condition of Our said Dominion of Canada; Now We do hereby signify Our pleasure that all such Returns be accurately prepared and punctually transmitted to Us through one of Our principal Secretaries of State.

XIII. And whereas great prejudice may happen to Our service and to the security of Our said Dominion by the absence of the Governor General, you shall not, upon any pretence whatever, quit the said Dominion without having first obtained leave from Us for so doing, under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, or through one of Our principal Secretaries of State.

2. Letters-Patent¹⁸ and Instructions, 1878.

Draft of Letters-Patent passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, constituting the Office of Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada.

*Letters-Patent,
Dated 5th October, 1878.* }

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India; To all to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting:

WHEREAS We did, by certain Letters-Patent under the Great Seal of Our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster the Twenty-second day of May, 1872, in the Thirty-fifth Year of Our Reign, constitute and appoint Our Right Trusty and Right Well-beloved Cousin and Councillor, Frederick Temple, Earl of Dufferin, Knight of Our Most Illustrious Order of Saint Patrick, Knight Commander of Our Most Honorable Order of the Bath (now Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George), to be Our Governor-General in and over Our Dominion of Canada for and during Our will and pleasure:

And whereas by the 12th section of "The British North America Act, 1867," certain powers, authorities, and functions were declared to be vested in the Governor-General:

And whereas We are desirous of making effectual and permanent provision for the office of Governor-General in and over Our said Dominion of Canada, without making new Letters-Patent on each demise of the said Office:

Now know ye that We have revoked and determined, and by these presents do revoke and determine, the said recited Letters-Patent of the Twenty-second day of May, 1872, and every clause, article and thing therein contained:

And further know ye that We, of our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to constitute, order, and declare, and do by these presents constitute, order, and declare that there shall be a Governor-General (hereinafter called Our said Governor-General) in and over Our Dominion of Canada (hereinafter called Our said Dominion), and that the person who shall fill the said Office of the Governor-General shall be from time to time appointed by Commission under our Sign-Manual and Signet. And we do hereby authorize and command Our said Governor-General to do and execute, in due manner, all things that shall belong to his said command, and to the trust We have reposed in him, according to the several powers and authorities granted or appointed him by virtue of "The British North America Act, 1867," and of these present Letters-Patent, and of such Commission¹⁴ as may be issued to him under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, and according to such Instructions as may from time to time be given to him, under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, or by Our Order in Our Privy Council, or by us through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State, and to such Laws as are or shall hereafter be in force in Our said Dominion.

II. And We do hereby authorize and empower Our said Governor-General to keep and use the Great Seal of Our said Dominion for sealing all things whatsoever that shall pass the said Great Seal.

III. And We do further authorize and empower Our said Governor-General to constitute and appoint, in Our name and on Our behalf, all such Judges, Commissioners, Justices of the Peace, and other necessary Officers and Ministers of Our said Dominion, as may be lawfully constituted or appointed by Us.¹⁵

IV. And We do further authorize and empower Our said Governor-General, so far as we lawfully may, upon sufficient cause to him appearing, to remove from his office, or to suspend from the exercise of the same, any person exercising any office within Our said Dominion, under or by virtue of any Commission or Warrant granted, or which may be granted, by Us in Our name or under Our authority.

V. And We do further authorize and empower Our said Governor-General to exercise all powers lawfully belonging to us in respect of the summoning, proroguing, or dissolving the Parliament of Our said Dominion.¹⁶

VI. And whereas by "The British North America Act, 1867," it is amongst other things enacted, that it shall be lawful for Us, if We think fit, to authorize the Governor-General of Our Dominion of Canada to appoint any person or persons, jointly or severally, to be his Deputy or Deputies within any part or parts of Our said Dominion, and in that capacity to exercise, during the pleasure of Our said Governor-General, such of the powers, authorities, and functions of Our said Governor-General as he may deem it necessary or expedient to assign to such Deputy or Deputies, subject to any limitations or directions from time to time expressed or given by Us: Now We do hereby authorize and empower Our said Governor-General, subject to such limitations and directions as aforesaid, to appoint any person or persons, jointly or severally, to be his Deputy or Deputies within any part or parts of Our said Dominion of Canada, and in that capacity to exercise, during his pleasure, such of his powers, functions, and authorities as he may deem it necessary or expedient to assign to him or them: Provided always, that the appointment of such a Deputy or Deputies shall not affect the exercise of any such power, authority or function by Our said Governor-General in person.

VII. And We do hereby declare Our pleasure to be that, in the event of the death, incapacity, removal, or absence of Our said Governor-General out of Our said Dominion, all and every the powers and authorities herein granted to him shall, until Our further pleasure is signified therein, be vested in such person as may be appointed by Us under Our Sign-Manual and Signet to be Our Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Dominion; or if there shall be no such Lieutenant-Governor in Our said Dominion, then in such person or persons as may be appointed by Us under Our Sign-Manual and Signet to administer the Government of the same; and in case there shall be no person or persons within Our said Dominion so appointed by Us, then in the Senior Officer for the time being in command of Our regular troops in Our said Dominion: Provided that no such powers or authorities shall vest in such Lieutenant-Governor, or such other person or persons, until he or they shall have taken the oaths appointed to be taken by the Governor-General of Our said Dominion, and in the manner provided by the Instructions accompanying these Our Letters-Patent.

VIII. And We do hereby require and command all Our Officers and Ministers, Civil and Military, and all other the inhabitants of Our said Dominion, to be obedient, aiding and assisting unto Our said Governor-General, or, in the event of his death, incapacity, or absence, to such person or persons as may, from time to time, under the provisions of these Our Letters-Patent, administer the Government of Our said Dominion.

IX. And We do hereby reserve to Ourselves, Our heirs and successors, full power and authority from time to time to revoke, alter or amend these Our Letters-Patent as to Us or them shall seem meet.

X. And We do further direct and enjoin that these Our Letters-Patent shall be read and proclaimed at such place or places as Our said Governor-General shall think fit within Our said Dominion of Canada.

In Witness whereof We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Fifth day of October, in the Forty-second Year of Our Reign.

By Warrant under the Queen's Sign-Manual.

Draft of Instructions passed under the Royal Sign-Manual and Signet to the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada.

Dated 5th October, 1878.

VICTORIA R.

Instructions to Our Governor-General in and over Our Dominion of Canada, or, in his absence, to Our Lieutenant-Governor or the Officer for the time being administering the Government of Our said Dominion.

Given at Our Court at Balmoral, this Fifth day of October, 1878, in the Forty-second year of Our Reign.

WHEREAS by certain Letters-Patent bearing even date herewith, We have constituted, ordered, and declared that there shall be a Governor-General (hereinafter called Our said Governor-General) in and over Our Dominion of Canada (hereinafter called Our said Dominion), and We have thereby authorized and commanded Our said Governor-General to do and execute in due manner all things that shall belong to his said command, and to the trust We have reposed in him, according to the several powers and authorities granted or appointed him by virtue of the said Letters-Patent and of such Commission as may be issued to him under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, and according to such Instructions as may from time to time be given to him, under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, or by Our Order in Our Privy Council, or by Us through One of Our Principal Secretaries of State, and to such Laws as are or shall hereafter be in force in Our said Dominion :

Now, therefore, We do, by these, Our Instructions under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, declare Our pleasure to be that Our said Governor-General for the time being shall, with all due solemnity, cause Our Commission, under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, appointing Our said Governor-General for the time being, to be read and published in the presence of the Chief Justice for the time being, or other Judge of the Supreme Court of Our said Dominion, and of the members of the Privy Council in Our said Dominion :

And We do further declare Our pleasure to be that Our said Governor-General, and every other officer appointed to administer the Government of Our said Dominion, shall take the Oath¹⁷ of Allegiance in the form provided by an Act passed in the Session holden in the thirty-first and thirty-second years of Our Reign, intituled : "An Act to Amend the Law relating to Promissory Oaths ;" and likewise that he or they shall take the usual Oath for the due execution of the Office of Our Governor-General in and over Our said Dominion, and for the due and impartial administration of justice ; which Oaths the said Chief Justice for the time being, of Our said Dominion, or, in his absence, or in the event of his being otherwise incapacitated, any Judge of the Supreme Court of Our said Dominion shall, and he is hereby required to tender and administer unto him or them.

II. And We do authorize and require Our said Governor-General from time to time, by himself or by any other person to be authorized by him in that behalf, to administer to all and to every persons or person as he shall think fit, who shall hold any office or place of trust or profit in Our said Dominion, the said Oath of Allegiance, together with such other Oath or Oaths as may from time to time, be prescribed by any Laws or Statutes in that behalf made and provided.

III. And We do require Our said Governor-General to communicate forthwith to the Privy Council for Our said Dominion these Our Instructions, and likewise all such others from time to time as he shall find convenient for Our service to be imparted to them.

IV. Our said Governor-General is to take care that all laws assented to by him in Our name, or reserved for the signification of Our pleasure thereon, shall, when transmitted by him, be fairly abstracted in the margins, and be accompanied, in such cases as may seem to him necessary, with such explanatory observations as may be required to exhibit the reasons and occasions for proposing such Laws ; and he shall also transmit fair copies of the Journals and Minutes of the proceedings of the Parliament of Our said Dominion, which he is to require from the clerks, or other proper officers in that behalf, of the said Parliament.

V. And We do further authorize and empower Our said Governor-General, as he shall see occasion, in Our name and on Our behalf, when any crime has been committed for which the offender may be tried within Our said Dominion, to grant a pardon to any accomplice not being the actual perpetrator of such crime, who shall give such information as shall lead to the conviction of the principal offender ; and further, to grant to any offender convicted of any crime in any Court, or before any Judge Justice, or Magistrate, within Our said Dominion, a pardon, either free or subject to lawful conditions, or any respite of the execution of the sentence of any such offender, for such period as to Our said Governor-General may seem fit, and to remit any fines, penalties, or forfeitures which may become due and payable to Us. Provided always, that Our said Governor-General shall not in any case, except where the offence has been of a political nature, make it a condition of any pardon or remission of sentence that the offender shall be banished from or shall absent himself from Our said Dominion. And We do hereby direct and enjoin that Our said Governor-General shall not pardon or reprove any such offender without first receiving in capital cases the advice of the Privy Council for Our said Dominion, and in other cases the advice of one, at least, of his Ministers ; and in any case in which such pardon or reprove might directly affect the interests of Our Empire, or of any country or place beyond the jurisdiction of the Government of Our said Dominion, Our said Governor-General shall, before deciding as to either pardon or reprove, take those interests specially into his own personal consideration in conjunction with such advice as aforesaid.¹⁸

VI. And whereas great prejudice may happen to Our service and to the security of Our said Dominion by the absence of Our said Governor-General, he shall not, upon any pretence whatever, quit Our said Dominion without having first obtained leave from Us for so doing under Our Sign-Manual and Signet, or through one of Our Principal Secretaries of State.

NOTES TO GOVERNOR'S COMMISSIONS.

¹ The changes which took place in 1878 in the form of the Commission to the Governor-General of Canada, and also in the Instructions accompanying the Commission, made it necessary to introduce these documents from two different periods. Those issued to Lord Monck are selected because he was the first Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, and those issued to Lord Lorne, because he was the first appointed after the changes above referred to were made. The changes themselves can easily be ascertained by a comparison of the texts, and a lucid account of the circumstances which led to them will be found in Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies," pp. 77-90. These documents may be usefully compared with the Commission issued to Governor Cornwallis, of Nova Scotia, in 1749 (pp. 9-16 above), and the Commission issued to Governor Murray, of Quebec, in 1763 (pp. 74-77 above). Lord Monck's "Commission" and "Instructions," 1867, are reprinted from the Dom. Sess. Papers of 1867, No. 22.

² The "Commission" and "Instructions" issued to Lord Monck in 1861 do not differ materially from those issued to Sir John Young (afterwards Lord Lisgar) in 1866, and to Lord Dufferin in 1872.

³ The most important was Cape Breton.

⁴ Lord Monck did not actually administer the Government in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, each of which had its own Lieutenant-Governor, while the "Province of Canada" under the Union Act of 1840 had none. Lord Durham had come to Canada in 1838, after having been appointed "by five several Commissions" Governor of each of the Provinces of Lower Canada, Upper Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island; by an additional Commission he had been created "Governor-General of all the Provinces on the Continent of North America and of the Islands of Prince Edward and Newfoundland," each of the Provinces except Lower Canada, which was administered by Lord Durham himself, having its own Lieutenant-Governor. For the text of his Commission as Governor-General see Christie's "History of Lower Canada," vol. v., pp. 149-152. Sir George Arthur, then Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, was the last who held that office. The successors of Lord Durham, prior to Lord Monck's appointment, were (1) Charles Edward Poulett Thompson (afterwards Lord Sydenham), whose Commission appointed him in 1839 "Governor-General of British North America, and Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over the Provinces of Lower Canada and Upper Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the Island of Prince Edward"; (2) Sir Charles Bagot, 1842; (3) Sir Charles (afterward Lord) Metcalfe, 1843; (4) Lord Elgin, 1846; and (5) Sir Edmund Walker Head, 1854.

⁸ The last exercise of this prerogative by a Canadian Governor, without the advice of his responsible Ministers, was by Lord Dufferin in the case of Ambrose Lepine, in 1875. The death sentence pronounced upon him for complicity in the murder of Thomas Scott during the Red River rebellion of 1869-70 was commuted to two years' imprisonment with permanent deprivation of political rights, and Lord Dufferin, in an official communication to the then Minister of Justice, stated that he acted "under the Royal Instructions, which authorize the Governor-General in certain capital cases, to dispense with the advice of his Ministers, and to exercise the prerogative of the Crown according to his independent judgment and on his own personal responsibility." As to the "Instructions" here cited, see p. 251 above. Lord Dufferin's official letter to the Minister of Justice will be found in the "Canada Gazette Extra" of June 19, 1875, and in Dom. Sess. Papers for 1875, No. 11. An accurate summary of the whole case, together with a discussion of the administration of the prerogative of mercy in other self-governing colonies is given in Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies," pp. 251-274. Compare Section V. of the "Royal Instructions" of 1878 (pp. 257-258 above). The Lepine commutation case was discussed with approbation in the House of Lords (Hansard, Third Series, vol. 223, pp. 1065-1077).

¹⁰ This term was introduced into Canada by the Confederation Act, 1867 (section 11).

¹¹ See Note 7 above. Compare on this point the "Royal Instructions" of 1878 (pp. 256-258, above). See also Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies" (pp. 331-343); Dom. Sess. Papers for 1876, No. 116; ibid for 1877, No. 89; and ibid for 1879, No. 181. As to the effect of refusal of advice by a Governor, note the precedent set by the Lafontaine-Baldwin Ministry in 1843.

¹² See Note 8 above.

¹³ Prior to the issue of these "Letters-Patent" there was no permanently constituted office of "Governor-General" of Canada, each successive Governor having been appointed by a special "Commission" which defined his functions, and informed by special "Instructions" as to the manner in which he should discharge them. As to the course of events which led to the issue of these "Letters-Patent" making the office a permanent one, and to the issue of permanent "Royal Instructions" to accompany them, see Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies" (pp. 77-90); Dom. Sess. Papers, 1877, No. 13; ibid, 1879, No. 181; and Hansard, Third Series, vol. 244, p. 1312. The documents are reprinted from the Dom. Sess. Papers of 1879, No. 14.

¹⁴ See "Commission" to Lord Lorne (pp. 253-259 above).

¹⁵ See Note 7 above.

¹⁶ For a useful discussion of the relation of a Governor to his responsible Ministers in regard to the matters here enumerated, see Todd's "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies," pp. 460-575.

¹⁷ Compare the "Royal Instructions," p. 249 above.

mission is dated August 18th, 1883, and (2) Lord Stanley of Preston, the date of whose Commission is May 1st, 1888.

²⁰ Some changes have been made in the form of the Commission since 1878, and to show their nature the Commission to Lord Stanley of Preston is here given from the official printed copy:

" We do by this Our Commission under our Sign Manual and Signet appoint you, the said Frederick Arthur, Baron Stanley of Preston, to be during our pleasure our Governor-General in and over our Dominion of Canada, with all the powers, rights, privileges, and advantages to the said office belonging or appertaining.

II. And we do hereby authorize, empower, and command you to exercise and perform all and singular the powers and directions contained in our Letters-Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date at Westminster, the fifth day of October, 1878, constituting the said office of Governor-General, or in any other Letters-Patent adding to, amending, or substituted for the same, according to such orders and instructions as our Governor-General for the time being hath already received from us, or as you shall hereafter receive from us.

III. And, further, we do hereby appoint that so soon as you shall have taken the prescribed oaths, and have entered upon the duties of your office, this our present Commission shall supersede our Commission under our Sign Manual and Signet bearing date the eighteenth day of August, 1883, in the forty-seventh year of our reign, appointing our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, Henry Charles Keith, Marquis of Lansdowne, now Knight Grand Cross of our most distinguished Order of Saint Michael and St. George, to be our Governor-General of our Dominion of Canada.

IV. And we do hereby command all and singular our Officers, Ministers, and loving subjects in our said Dominion, and all others whom it may concern, to take due notice hereof, and to give their ready obedience accordingly.

Given at our Court at Windsor, this first day of May, 1888, in the fifty-first year of our reign.

By Her Majesty's command.

KNUTSFORD."

Whereas it is not possible, considering the distance of the countries, that what relates to America should be effected within the same time,² or even to fix the time of its entire execution, His Britannic Majesty likewise engages on his part to send to His Most Christian Majesty, immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, two persons of rank and consideration, who shall remain there as hostages, till there shall be received a certain and authentic account of the restitution of Isle Royal, called Cape Breton, and of all the conquests which the arms or subjects of His Britannic Majesty may have made, before or after the signing of the preliminaries, in the East or West Indies.

Provided, nevertheless, that Isle Royal, called Cape Breton, shall be restored, with all the artillery and warlike stores which shall have been found therein on the day of its surrender, conformably to the inventories which have been made thereof, and in the condition that the said place was in on the said day of its surrender.

5. The Treaty of Versailles⁴, 1783.

IV. His Majesty, the King of Great Britain, is maintained in his right to the Island of Newfoundland, and to the adjacent islands, as the whole were assured to him by the thirteenth article of the Treaty of Utrecht; excepting the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, which are ceded in full right, by the present treaty, to His Most Christian Majesty.

V. His Majesty the Most Christian King, in order to prevent the quarrels which have hitherto arisen between the two nations of England and France, consents to renounce the right of fishing, which belongs to him in virtue of the aforesaid article of the Treaty of Utrecht, from Cape Bonavista to Cape St. John, situated on the eastern coast of Newfoundland, in fifty degrees north latitude; and His Majesty the King of Great Britain consents on his part that the fishery assigned to the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty, beginning at the said Cape St. John, passing to the north, and descending by the western coast of the Island of Newfoundland, shall extend to the place called Cape Raye, situated in forty-seven degrees fifty minutes latitude. The French fishermen shall enjoy the fishery which is assigned to them by the present article, as they had the right to enjoy that which was assigned to them by the Treaty of Utrecht.

VI. With regard to the fishery in the gulph of St. Lawrence, the French shall continue to exercise it conformably to the fifth article of the Treaty of Paris.¹

XX. As it is necessary to appoint a certain period for the restitutions and evacuations to be made by each of the high contracting parties, it is agreed that the King of Great Britain shall cause to be evacuated the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, three months after the ratification of the present treaty, or sooner, if it can be done.

6. The Treaty of Paris,² 1783.

I. His Britannic Majesty acknowledges the said United States, viz., New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, to be free, sovereign, and independent states; that he treats with them as such; and for himself, his heirs and successors, relinquishes all claims to the government, propriety, and territorial rights of the same, and every part thereof.

II. And that all disputes which might arise in future on the subject of the boundaries of the said United States may be prevented, it is hereby agreed and declared that the following are and shall be their boundaries, viz., from the north-west angle of Nova Scotia,³ viz., that angle which is formed by a line drawn due north, from the source of Saint Croix river to the Highlands, along the said Highlands which divide those rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from those which fall into the Atlantic Ocean, to the northwesternmost head of Connecticut river; thence down along the middle of that river to the forty-fifth degree of north latitude; from thence by a line due west on said latitude until it strikes the river Iroquois or Cataraquy⁴; thence along the middle of said river into Lake Ontario ; through the middle of said lake, until it strikes the communication by water between that lake and Lake Erie ; thence along the middle of said communication into Lake Erie ; through the middle of said lake, until it arrives at the water-communication between that lake and lake Huron ; thence along the middle of said water-communication into the lake Huron ; thence through the middle of said lake to the water-communication between that lake and Lake Superior ; thence through Lake Superior, northward of the isles Royal and Phelipeaux, to the Long Lake ; thence through the middle of said Long Lake, and the water-communication between it and the Lake of the Woods, to the said Lake of the Woods ; thence through the said lake to the most northwestern point thereof, and from thence on a due west course to the river Mississippi ; thence by a line to be drawn along the middle of the said river Mississippi, until it shall intersect the northernmost part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude :—South, by a line to be drawn due east from the determination of the line last-mentioned, in the latitude of thirty-one degrees north of the equator, to the middle of the river Apalachicola or Catahouche ; thence along the middle thereof to its junction with the Flint river ; thence strait to the head of St. Mary's river, and thence down along the middle of St. Mary's river to the Atlantic Ocean :—East, by a line to be drawn along the middle of the river St. Croix, from its mouth in the Bay of Fundy to its source ; and from its source directly north to the aforesaid Highlands, which divide the rivers that fall into the Atlantic Ocean from those which fall into the river St. Lawrence : comprehending all islands within twenty leagues of any part of the shores of the United States, and lying between lines to be drawn due east from the points where the aforesaid boundaries between Nova Scotia on the one part, and East Florida on the other, shall respectively touch the Bay of Fundy, and the Atlantic Ocean ; excepting such islands as now are, or heretofore have been, within the limits of the said Province of Nova Scotia.

² On the 30th of November, 1782, "provisional articles of peace and reconciliation" between Great Britain and the United States, were signed at Paris, but it was agreed that the formal treaty between the two powers should not be "concluded until terms of peace should be agreed upon between Great Britain and France." The treaty of Paris was therefore signed on the 3rd of September, 1783, immediately after the signing of the Treaty of Versailles. (See note 4, p. 266). The contracting powers were George III. of Great Britain, and "the United States of America": the former being represented by David Hartley M.P., and the latter by John Adams of Massachusetts, Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania, and John Jay of New York.

III. It is agreed, that the people of the United States shall continue to enjoy unmolested the right to take fish of every kind on the Grand Bank and on all the other banks of Newfoundland : also in the gulph of St. Lawrence, and at all other places in the sea, where the inhabitants of both countries used at any time heretofore to fish. And also that the inhabitants of the United States shall have liberty to take fish of every kind on such part of the coast of Newfoundland, as British fishermen shall use (but not to dry or cure the same on that island) and also on the coasts, bays, and creeks of all other of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America ; and that the American fishermen shall have liberty to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks of Nova Scotia, Magdalen islands, and Labrador, so long as the same shall remain unsettled ; but so soon as the same, or either of them, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such settlement, without a previous agreement for that purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground.

IV. It is agreed, that creditors on either side shall meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value in sterling money of all bona fide debts heretofore contracted.

V. It is agreed, that the Congress shall earnestly recommend it to the legislatures of the respective states, to provide for the restitution of all estates, rights, and properties which have been confiscated, belonging to real British subjects; and also of the estates, rights, and properties of persons resident in districts in the possession of His Majesty's arms, and who have not borne arms against the said United States; and that persons of any other description shall have free liberty to go to any part or parts of any of the Thirteen United States, and therein to remain twelve months unmolested in their endeavours to obtain the restitution of such of their estates, rights, and properties as may have been confiscated; and that Congress shall also earnestly recommend to the several states a re-consideration and revision of all acts or laws regarding the premises, so as to render the said laws or acts perfectly consistent, not only with justice and equity, but with that spirit of conciliation, which, on the return of the blessings of peace, should universally prevail. And that Congress shall also earnestly recommend to the several states, that the estates, rights, and properties of such last mentioned persons shall be restored to them, they refunding to any persons who may be now in possession the bona fide price (where any has been given) which such persons may have paid on purchasing any of the said lands, rights, or properties since the confiscation. And it is agreed, that all persons who have any interest in confiscated lands, either by debts, marriage settlements, or otherwise, shall meet with no lawful impediment in the prosecution of their just rights.¹

VI. That there shall be no future confiscations made, nor any prosecutions commenced against any person or persons, for or by reason of the part which he or they may have taken in the present war; and that no person shall on that account suffer any future loss or damage, either in his person, liberty or property; and that those who may be in confinement on such charges at the time of the ratification of the treaty in America, shall be immediately set at liberty, and the prosecutions so commenced be discontinued.

VII. There shall be a firm and perpetual peace between His Britannic Majesty and the said states, and between the subjects of the one and the citizens of the other, wherefore all hostilities, both by sea and land, shall from henceforth cease : all prisoners on both sides shall be set at liberty ; and His Britannic Majesty shall with all convenient speed, and without causing any destruction or the carrying away any negroes, or other property of the American inhabitants, withdraw all his armies, garrisons,¹ and fleets from the said United States, and from every port, place, and harbour within the same ; leaving in all fortifications the American artillery that may be therein ; and shall also order and cause all archives, records, deeds, and papers belonging to any of the said states, or their citizens, which in the course of the war may have fallen into the hands of his officers, to be forthwith restored and delivered to the proper states and persons to whom they belong.

VIII. The navigation of the river Mississippi, from its source to the ocean, shall for ever remain free and open to the subjects of Great Britain and the citizens of the United States.

IX. In case it should so happen that any place or territory belonging to Great Britain, or to the United States, should have been conquered by the arms of either, from the other, before the arrival of the said provisional articles in America, it is agreed that the same shall be restored without difficulty, and without requiring any compensation.

X. The solemn ratifications of the present treaty, expedited in good and due form, shall be exchanged between the contracting parties in the space of six months, or sooner if possible, to be computed from the day of the signature of the present treaty.

APPENDIX B.

BOUNDARIES OF CANADA, AND OF THE CANADIAN PROVINCES.

1. The Province of Nova Scotia.

This Province, with the exception of Cape Breton, was surrendered to Great Britain by France under the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713,¹ but its boundaries were left to be determined by "Commissioners" appointed by each Government within a year.² The provision respecting delimitation was not carried out, and in 1720 Major (afterwards Governor) Mascarene prepared for the information of the Lords of Trade and Plantations a description³ of Nova Scotia from which the following extract is taken :

The boundaries having as yet not been agreed on between the British and French Governments in these parts as stipulated in the 10th article of the Treaty of Utrecht, no just ones can be settled in this description. The extent of the Province of Nova Scotia or Acadie, according to the notion the Britains have of it, is from the limits of the Government of Massachusetts Bay in New England, or Kennebeck River, about the 44th degree north latitude, to Cape de Roziers on the south side of the entrance of the River of St. Lawrence in the 44th degree of the same latitude, and its breadth extends from the easternmost part of the Island of Cape Breton to the south side of the River St. Lawrence. Out of this large tract the French had yielded to them at the above treaty the islands situated at the mouth of the River St. Lawrence and in the Gulph of the same, with the Island of Cape Breton.⁴

An unsuccessful attempt was made by the appointment of "Commissaries" under the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, 1748, to settle the question of the Acadian boundaries, Governor Shirley, of Massachusetts, representing the British Government.⁵ The western and northern boundaries of Nova Scotia remained undetermined until the British conquest of Canada, and the surrender of the whole country under the Treaty of Paris, 1763. According to Haliburton¹ they were then fixed "by the Crown" as follows :

"To the northward, our said Province shall be bounded by the southern boundary of our Province of Quebec,² as far as the western extremity of the Bay des Chaleurs. To the eastward by the said bay, and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, to the cape or promontory called Cape Breton in the island of that name, including that island, the island of St. Johns,³ and all other islands⁴ within six leagues of the coast, to the southward by the Atlantic Ocean from the said cape to Cape Sable, including the island of that name, and all other islands within 40 leagues of the coast, with all the rights, members and appurtenances, whatsoever, thereto belonging. And to the westward, although our said Province hath anciently extended, and doth of right extend, as far as the River Pentagoet or Penobscot, it shall be bounded by a line drawn from Cape Sable across the entrance of the Bay of Fundy, to the mouth of the River St. Croix ; by the said river to its source, and by a line drawn due north, from thence to the southern boundary of our colony of Quebec."⁵

In 1769 Prince Edward Island was created a separate Province, and the boundaries of Nova Scotia, as described in the Commission issued⁶ to the first Governor, correspond with those cited by Haliburton.

In 1784 the part of Nova Scotia lying north of a line drawn across the isthmus from the head of the Bay of Fundy up the Musquash River to its source, and thence direct to Baie Verte was erected into the separate Province of New Brunswick,⁷ and the line then fixed is still the boundary between that Province and Nova Scotia. In the same year Cape Breton was erected into a quasi-independent Province under a Lieutenant-Governor and Council, but it was re-annexed to Nova Scotia in 1820.

2. The Province of New Brunswick.

The early boundaries of New Brunswick are given above in connection with those of Nova Scotia. The area of the Province has remained unchanged, but the western and northern boundaries were more minutely defined by Imperial Statute in 1851 (14-15 Vict. cap. 63), which recites and ratifies an award made by arbitrators⁸ appointed to settle disputes between Canada and New Brunswick, which award is in the following terms :—

"That New Brunswick shall be bounded on the west by the boundary of the United States, as traced by the Commissioners of Boundary under the treaty

3. The Provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

It is impossible to state definitely how much territory was covered by the Articles of Capitulation, 1760, and the Treaty of Paris, 1763 (pp. 31-57 and 61-65 above). During the negotiations which preceded the treaty the French Government consented "to cede Canada in the most extensive manner," and disclaimed having affirmed "that all that does not belong to Canada belongs to Louisiana."³ An offer was subsequently made on behalf of France "to guaranty Canada to England in the utmost extent she required."⁴ The Marquis de Vaudreuil, who by this time had returned to France, stated in a published letter⁵ that he had "traced out no limits whatever," and that to an officer sent to him for maps he had given the information that Louisiana extended on one side "to the carrying place of the Miamia, which is the height of the lands, whose rivers run into the Ouabache; and on the other to the head of the river of the Illinois." Gen. Haldimand, the officer above referred to, in a letter to Gen. Amherst, commenting on the letter of the Marquis de Vaudreuil, states that in the presence of the latter before he left Montreal and without any protest from him, he drew a pencil line on a map which carried the limits of Canada from the source of the Illinois River to the Mississippi and thence northward to Red Lake, and up the Ohio and Wabache from the junction of the former with the Mississippi.¹ This would seem to include in the ceded territory the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, and parts of Indiana and Minnesota, as well as the territory east of the Wabash and north of the Ohio.

By the Royal Proclamation of 1763 the eastern part of Canada was included in the new Province of Quebec,² and by the Quebec Act of 1774 this Province was enlarged so as to be quite as extensive as Canada was in the conception of Gen. Haldimand.³

A new southern boundary was given to Quebec by the Treaty of Paris of 1763, the most important change being the severance from the Province of all the region south of Lakes Erie and Ontario as far as the Ohio, and of all west of Lakes Huron and St. Clair as far west as the Mississippi.⁴ In 1791, by Order-in-Council,⁵ in connection with the passing of the Constitutional Act, Quebec was divided into Upper and Lower Canada, the dividing line being thus defined :

"To commence at a stone boundary on the north bank of the Lake St. Francis, at the cove west of Pointe au Boudet, in the limit between the Township of Lancaster and the Seigneurie of New Longueuil, running along the said limit in the direction of north thirty-four degrees west to the westernmost angle of the said Seigneurie of New Longueuil, thence along the north-western boundary of the Seigneurie of Vaudreuil, running north twenty-five degrees east until it strikes the Ottawa river, to ascend the said river into the Lake Tomiscaming, and from the head of the said lake, by a line drawn due north until it strikes the boundary line of Hudson's Bay, including all the territory to the westward and southward of the said line, to the utmost extent of the country commonly called or known by the name of Canada."

In the Jay treaty of 1794 an effort was made to define the boundary between British America and the United States more accurately than had been done by the second article of the Treaty of Paris, 1763.⁶ Article IV. of the Jay treaty provided a method of locating the boundary west from the Lake of the Woods in the event of its being ascertained that the Mississippi did not extend so far north as a due west line from its north-west angle. Article V. provided for the appointment of three Commissioners to decide what river was meant by the "St. Croix," mentioned in the Treaty of 1783.

The Treaty of Ghent, 1814, contained further provisions for the accurate definition of the same boundary. Article V. provided for the appointment of two Commissioners to "ascertain and determine" the points mentioned in the Treaty of 1783 between the mouth of the St. Croix and the intersection of the St. Lawrence by the 45th parallel of latitude. Article VI. provided a similar method for ascertaining the precise location of the boundary through the River St. Lawrence and the great lakes to the "water communication" between Lake Huron and Lake Superior; and Article VII. made similar provision for ascertaining the boundary between the same "water communication" and "the most north-western part of the Lake of the Woods."

In 1822 the Commissioners¹ under Article VI. of the Treaty of Ghent gave a decision, the text of which minutely describes the international boundary from a "stone monument,"² 1840 yards distant from the stone church in the Indian village of St. Regis," on the south bank of the St. Lawrence, to "the foot of the Neebish rapids," in the River St. Mary, which is the outlet of Lake Superior. This boundary line is described with reference mainly to the islands amongst which it passes, and which are especially numerous in the "Thousand Islands" archipelago. The utmost care is taken to name or number all the islands adjacent to it in the St. Lawrence River proper, in the Niagara River, at the west end of Lake Erie, in the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers, and in the River St. Mary as far as the Neebish Rapids, which the Commissioners made the terminus of their survey.

The Convention of London, 1827,³ provided for a reference of the matter dealt with by Article V. of the Treaty of Ghent "to some friendly sovereign or state," but no precise and detailed definition of the boundary between the head waters of the St. Croix and the intersection of the St. Lawrence by the 45th parallel of latitude was given until it was embodied in the first article of the Ashburton Treaty of 1842. The second article of the same treaty gave a detailed description of the boundary from the Neebish Rapids up the River St. Mary, amongst the islands of Lake Superior to the mouth of Pigeon River, and thence to the "northwestern point" of the Lake of the Woods."⁴

By these various conventions and awards the southern boundary of Quebec and Ontario was permanently determined from the "northwest angle of Nova Scotia" (now New Brunswick) westward to the "northwest angle" of the

Lake of the Woods. By the unanimous award of three arbitrators¹ in 1878 the western and northern boundaries of Ontario were given in detail from the last mentioned angle by way of the English and Albany rivers to Hudson's Bay where its shore is intersected by a line drawn due north from Lake Temiscaming.² The Imperial Privy Council in 1884 made an independent award³ under a joint reference by the Governments of Ontario and Manitoba, virtually confirming the award of 1878 pro tanto. Both of these decisions were superseded by the passage of an Imperial Act⁴ in 1889, in response to the subjoined address from both Houses of the Dominion Parliament. The preamble to the Act states that the Government of Ontario have assented⁵ to the boundaries specified in the address, that the boundary between Ontario and Quebec is identical with the one fixed by the proclamation⁶ of the Governor-General in November, 1791, and that the boundary between Ontario and Manitoba is identical with the one found correct by the Privy Council in 1884. The address above referred to contains the details of the westerly, northerly, and easterly boundaries of Ontario, which are thus made legally valid, as follows :

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Senate and Commons of Canada, in Parliament assembled, humbly approach your Majesty with the request that your Majesty may be graciously pleased to cause a measure to be submitted to the Parliament of the United Kingdom, declaring and providing the following to be the westerly, northerly, and easterly boundaries of the Province of Ontario, that is to say :—

Commencing at the point where the international boundary between the United States of America and Canada strikes the western shore of Lake Superior, thence westerly along the said boundary to the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods, thence along a line drawn due north until it strikes the middle line of the course of the river discharging the waters of the lake called Lake Seul or the Lonely Lake, whether above or below its confluence with the stream flowing from the Lake of the Woods towards Lake Winnipeg, and thence proceeding eastward from the point at which the before-mentioned line strikes the middle line of the course of the river last aforesaid, along the middle line of the course of the same river (whether called by the name of the English River or, as to the part below the confluence, by the name of the River Winnipeg) up to Lake Seul or the Lonely Lake, and thence along the middle line of Lake Seul or Lonely Lake to the head of that lake, and thence by a straight line to the nearest point of the middle line of the waters of Lake St.

⁶ The proclamation fixes the boundary in a general way from Lake Temiscaming to Hudson's Bay. In 1874 the Ontario Legislature passed an Act (38 Vict. cap. 5), which makes provision for a determination of the boundary in detail. A similar Act was passed in the same year by the Quebec Legislature (38 Vict. cap. 6), but though each of these statutes has been re-enacted (R. S. O., 1877, cap. 3; R. S. O., 1887, cap. 3; and R. S. Q., 1888, Title I., cap. I.) the Dominion Parliament has not taken any steps to establish the line of boundary agreed upon by the Provinces.

Joseph, and thence along that middle line until it reaches the foot or outlet of that lake, and thence along the middle line of the river by which the waters of Lake St. Joseph discharge themselves to the shore of the part of Hudson's Bay commonly known as James' Bay, and thence south-easterly following upon the said shore to a point where a line drawn due north from the head of Lake Temiscamingue would strike it, and thence due south along the said line to the head of the said lake, and thence through the middle channel of the said lake into the Ottawa River, and thence descending along the middle of the main channel of the said river to the intersection by the prolongation of the western limits of the Seigneurie of Rigaud, such main channel being as indicated on a map of the Ottawa Ship Canal Survey made by Walter Shanly, C.E., and approved of by an Order of the Governor-General-in-Council, dated the twenty-first July, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six; and thence southerly following the said westerly boundary of the Seigneurie of Rigaud to the southwest angle of the said Seigneurie, and then southerly along the western boundary of the augmentation of the township of Newton to the northwest angle of the Seigneurie of Longueuil, and thence south-easterly along the south-western boundary of the said Seigneurie of New Longueuil to a stone boundary on the north bank of the Lake St. Francis at the cove west of Point au Baudet, such line from the Ottawa River to Lake St. Francis being as indicated on a plan of the line of boundary between Upper and Lower Canada, made in accordance with the Act 23 Victoria, chapter 21, and approved by Order of the Governor-General-in-Council, dated the 16th of March, 1861.

The easterly boundary of Ontario is the westerly boundary of Quebec, and the southerly boundary of that Province is fixed by the Ashburton Treaty, 1842, on the side of the United States, and by Imperial Statute¹ on the side of New Brunswick. On the east Quebec is bounded by the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Labrador and its northerly boundary is still undetermined as a whole, but is fixed as to its western extremity at the point where the due north line from Lake Temiscaming intersects the south shore of Hudson's Bay.²

4. The Province of Manitoba.

The boundary between the then Province of Quebec and the United States, as fixed by the Treaty of Paris of 1783, stopped at the Mississippi.³ Article

² By the Royal Proclamation of 1763 the River St. John was made the easterly limit of the Province of Quebec on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, all the rest of that shore and of the Atlantic coast of Labrador to Hudson's Straits being, with Anticosti and the other islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, annexed to Newfoundland. Labrador, the north shore of the river and Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the islands in the gulf, were all transferred to Quebec by the Quebec Act of 1774. They remained part of Quebec till 1791 and part of Lower Canada till 1809, in which year the Imperial Parliament passed an Act (49 George III. cap. 27), which re-annexed to Newfoundland, with the exception of the "Madelaine" islands, all that had been added to it by the Proclamation of 1763. The Imperial Parliament passed an Act in 1825 (6 George IV. cap. 59), restoring to Lower Canada part of what had been thus taken from it in 1807, including the Island of Anticosti and so much of the north shore of the river and Gulf of St. Lawrence as "lies to the westward of a line to be drawn due north and south from the bay or harbour of Ance Sablon, inclusive, as far as the fifty-second degree of north latitude." Though the northern boundary of Quebec has never been defined it is worthy of remark that the fifty-second parallel is further north than the intersection of the south shore of Hudson's Bay by the due north line from Lake Temiscaming.

IV. of the Jay Treaty of 1794 provided for a survey of that river from below the falls of St. Anthony (Minneapolis) for the purpose of ascertaining whether it extended far enough north to intercept a due west line from the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods. By the London Convention of 1818 :

“It is agreed that a line drawn from the most northwestern point of the Lake of the Woods along the 49th parallel of north latitude, or if the said point shall not be in the 49th parallel of north latitude then that a line drawn from the said point due north or south, as the case may be, until the said line shall intersect the said parallel of north latitude, and from the point of such intersection due west along and with the said parallel, shall be the line of demarcation between the territories of the United States and those of his Britannic Majesty, and that the said line shall form the northern boundary of the said territories of the United States and the southern boundary of the territories of his Britannic Majesty, from the Lake of the Woods to the Stony¹ Mountains.

The western, northern, and eastern boundaries of Manitoba have been twice defined by the Parliament of Canada, (1) by the Act² which created the Province in 1870, and (2) by the Act³ which enlarged its area and extended its boundaries in 1881. By the definition in the latter statute Manitoba extends from the United States boundary on the south to “the twelfth base line in the system of Dominion Land Surveys” on the north, and from the line between the twenty-ninth and thirtieth ranges of townships west of the first principal meridian on the west, to a line drawn due north from the point where the Ontario boundary intersects that of the United States on the east.

5. The Province of British Columbia.

When by the London Convention of 1818 the 49th parallel of north latitude was fixed as the international boundary the region west of the Rocky Mountains was comparatively unknown, and neither Great Britain nor the United States was in undisputed possession of it. By the same convention (Article III.) it was arranged that the commerce and navigation of the whole Pacific slope should be “free and open” to the citizens of both countries for ten years.

In 1825, by Articles III. and IV. of the Treaty of St. Petersburg, it was agreed between Great Britain and Russia that the boundary of Alaska should begin at Prince of Wales Island in 54 degrees 40 minutes north latitude, run up the Portland Channel to the 56th degree, thence pass along the summit of the mountain chain till it intersected the 141st meridian, and then follow that meridian to the “Frozen Ocean.”

³ Dom. Stat. 44 Vict. cap. 14; R. S. C., 1886, cap. 47.

In 1827 (Aug. 6) a convention was adopted at London between Great Britain and the United States by which the agreement of the third article of the Convention of 1818 was "indefinitely extended and continued in force," and it continued in force until superseded by the Treaty of Washington, 1846, which provided that the 49th parallel should be the international boundary from the Rocky Mountains "to the middle of the channel which separates the continent from Vancouver's Island, and thence southerly through the middle of the said channel, and of Fuca's straits to the Pacific Ocean."

Further knowledge of this "channel" brought to light the fact that there are two channels, the Rosario Strait on the United States side of the San Juan archipelago, and the Canal de Haro on the British side of it. The dispute as to which was the one meant in the treaty of 1846 was settled by an award of the Emperor of Germany under a provision of the Treaty of Washington, 1871, and in favour of the United States contention. The Canal de Haro is now, therefore, a part of the boundary.

By Imperial Statute ¹ Vancouver's Island was in 1849 made virtually a self-governing colony. A similar status was in 1858 ² conferred on British Columbia, the Act of the British Parliament giving it boundaries as follows: On the south "the frontier of the United States"; on the east the "main chain of the Rocky Mountains"; on the north "Simpson's river and the Finlay branch of the Peace"; on the west the Pacific Ocean, Queen Charlotte's Island being included. In 1863, by Imperial Statute, ³ the boundaries at present in existence were thus fixed:

"British Columbia shall * * * be held to comprise all such territories within the dominions of Her Majesty as are bounded to the south by the territories of the United States of America, to the west by the Pacific Ocean and the frontier of the Russian territories in North America, to the north by the sixtieth parallel of north latitude, and to the east, from the boundary of the United States northwards by the Rocky Mountains and the one hundred and twentieth meridian of west longitude, and shall include Queen Charlotte's Island and all other islands adjacent to the said territories, except Vancouver's Island and the islands adjacent thereto."

Vancouver's Island became part of British Columbia in 1866,⁴ and five years later the united colony became a Province of the Dominion of Canada. and the District of Keewatin.¹ It is bounded on the south by the 49th parallel of north latitude; on the west by the Rocky Mountains, the 120th meridian, the 60th parallel of north latitude west to Alaska, and the 141st meridian to the Arctic Ocean; and on the east by the western boundaries of Manitoba² and the District of Keewatin.³ Politically the "Northwest Territories" is a unit, there being but one Lieutenant-Governor and one Legislative Assembly for the whole territory; but the southern portion of it has been divided⁴ into four "provisional districts"—Assiniboia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Athabasca.

7. The Dominion of Canada.

A synthesis of the boundaries of the various Provinces, as given above, furnishes the data for a description of the boundary of the Dominion as a whole. Beginning at the intersection of the shore of the Arctic Ocean by the 141st meridian, the Arctic and Atlantic Oceans form the boundary as far as Hudson's Straits. Labrador,⁵ the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Atlantic Ocean continue it as far as Cape Sable, including the Magdelene Islands, Anticosti, Prince Edward Island, Cape Breton, Sable Island and all other islands within six leagues⁶ of the coast in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and within forty leagues of the Atlantic coast of Nova Scotia.⁷ From Cape Sable to the mouth of the St. Croix River the boundary is a line drawn across the entrance of the Bay of Fundy,⁸ so as to give the Grand Manan group of islands and most of those in Passamaquoddy Bay to Canada.⁹ It follows the St. Croix to its source,¹⁰ runs due north to the St. John, and then passes by a very irregular route to the intersection of the south bank of the St. Lawrence

On the 31st of July, 1880, an Imperial Order-in-Council was passed in the following terms: "From and after the first day of September, 1880, all British territories and possessions in North America, not already included within the Dominion of Canada, and all islands adjacent to any of such territories or possessions, shall (with the exception of the Colony of Newfoundland and its dependencies) become, and be annexed to, and form part of, the said Dominion of Canada, and become and be subject to the laws for the time being in force in the said Dominion, in so far as such laws may be applicable thereto." by the 45th parallel.¹ From that point it follows the navigable channel of the St. Lawrence to Lake Ontario, passes through that lake, the Niagara River, Lake Erie, Detroit River, Lake St. Clair, River St. Clair, Lake Huron and the lower part of the St. Mary River to the foot of the Neebish Rapids.²

From the Neebish Rapids the boundary is continued up the St. Mary River to and through Lake Superior to the mouth of Pigeon River, thence by way of Rainy Lake and Rainy River to the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods.³

From the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods the boundary runs due south to the 49th parallel and along that parallel to the Strait of San Juan de Fuca, and through it to the Pacific Ocean.⁴

The western boundary of the Dominion is the Pacific Ocean and the Portland Channel to the inland terminus of the latter, the Rocky Mountains to their intersection by the 141st meridian, and that meridian to the Arctic Ocean.⁵

APPENDIX C.

I. EXTRADITION OF FUGITIVE CRIMINALS.

Fugitive criminals may be surrendered by one country at the request of another, in accordance with international comity;¹ they must be surrendered by one country at the demand of another, if both countries have agreed by treaty to make such surrenders. Extradition is now for the most part a matter of treaty arrangement among civilized nations. As between Great Britain and the United States, the only treaty provisions heretofore adopted are the following :

1. The Jay Treaty,² London, 1794.

Article XXVII. It is further agreed that His Majesty and the United States, on mutual requisitions by them respectively, or by their respective ministers or officers authorized to make the same, will deliver up to justice all persons, who, being charged with murder or forgery,³ committed within the jurisdiction of either, shall seek an asylum within any of the countries of the other, provided that this shall only be done on such evidence of criminality, as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial, if the offence had there been committed. The expense of such apprehension and delivery shall be borne and defrayed by those who make the requisition and receive the fugitive.⁴

¹ For a lucid discussion of this ground of surrender, see Spears "Law of Extradition," Chapter I ; Clarke's "Law of Extradition," Third Edition, Chapter I.

² See Clarke's "Law of Extradition," Chapter III.

³ Compare the list of crimes in the Ashburton Treaty of 1842.

⁴ By Article XXVIII. of the same Treaty, it was provided that Article XXVII. should remain in force for only twelve years. The strained relations between the two powers prevented its renewal. Each of the treatises mentioned in Note 1, gives some account of the difficulty thrown in the way of its operation by the want of legislation to give it effect.

2. The Ashburton Treaty,¹ Washington, 1842.

Article X. It is agreed that the United States and Her Britannic Majesty shall, upon mutual requisition by them, or their ministers, officers, or authorities, respectively made, deliver up to justice all persons who, being charged with the crime² of murder, or assault with intent to commit murder, or piracy, or arson, or robbery, or forgery, or the utterance of forged paper, committed within the jurisdiction of either, shall seek an asylum, or shall be found within the territories of the other; provided that this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive, or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial, if the crime or offence had there been committed; and the respective judges and other magistrates of the two governments shall have power, jurisdiction, and authority,³ upon complaint made under oath, to issue a warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive or person so charged, that he may be brought before such judges or other magistrates, respectively, to the end that the evidence of criminality may be heard and considered; and if, on such hearing, the evidence be deemed sufficient to sustain the charge, it shall be the duty of the examining judge or magistrate to certify the same to the proper executive authority, that a warrant may issue for the surrender of such fugitive. The expense of such apprehension and delivery shall be borne and defrayed by the party who makes the requisition, and receives the fugitive.

XI. * * * The tenth article shall continue in force until one or the other of the parties shall signify its wish to terminate it, and no longer.⁴

¹ For an account of the Holmes case, which was the occasion of Article X. of the Ashburton Treaty, see Spears' "Law of Extradition," Chapter II., and Clarke's "Law of Extradition," Chapter III.

² Compare this list of extradition crimes with the list in the Jay Treaty above. The two treatises specified in Note 1 contain ample data for arriving at a definition of these terms.

³ Two alleged criminals were extradited under this treaty by the United States authorities at the request of the British Government, before any statute was enacted by Congress to give it effect. This was done in 1848 (9 U. S. Statutes at Large, 302). This Act was supplemented by another in 1860 (U. S. Statutes at Large, 84), and by subsequent enactments of less importance. In 1843 an Act (6 & 7 Vict. cap. 76) was passed by the British Parliament to give effect to the tenth Article of the Ashburton Treaty, and this was supplemented by two later Acts (8 & 9 Vict. cap. 120, and 29 & 30 Vict. cap. 121). These three Statutes were all repealed by "The Extradition Act, 1870" which is still in force. The Canadian Statutes dealing with this subject are "The Extradition Act, 1877" (40 Vict. cap. 25); an Act passed in 1882 (45 Vict. cap. 21) to amend the Act of 1877; the consolidation of these two Acts in the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1886 (cap. 142); and an Act (52 Vict. cap. 36) passed in 1889 to provide for the extradition of criminals to countries between which and Great Britain no extradition treaty exists.

⁴ The Ashburton Treaty was virtually suspended for a short time in 1876 as the result of a difference of opinion between the British and United States Governments over its working. (Spears' "Law of Extradition," cases of Caldwell, Lawrence, and Winslow.)

II. STIPULATIONS WITH FRANCE RESPECTING FISHERIES.

1. The Treaty of Utrecht, 1713.¹
2. The Treaty of Paris, 1763.²
3. The Treaty of Versailles, 1783.³

British Declaration,⁴ Versailles, 1783.

* * * In order that the fishermen of the two nations may not give cause for daily quarrels, His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting, in any manner, by their competition, the fishery of the French, during the temporary exercise of it which is granted to them, upon the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland; and he will, for this purpose, cause the fixed settlements which shall be formed there to be removed. His Britannic Majesty will give orders, that the French fishermen be not incommoded, in cutting the wood necessary for the repair of their scaffolds, huts, and fishing vessels.

The thirteenth article of the Treaty of Utrecht, and the method of carrying on the fishery, which has at all times been acknowledged, shall be the plan upon which the fishery shall be carried on there; it shall not be deviated from by either party; the French fishermen building only their scaffolds, confining themselves to the repair of their fishing vessels, and not wintering there; the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, on their part, not molesting in any manner the French fishermen during their fishing, nor injuring their scaffolds during their absence.

The King of Great Britain, in ceding the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon to France, regards them as ceded for the purpose of serving as a real shelter to the French fishermen, and in full confidence that these possessions will not become an object of jealousy between the two nations; and that the fishery between the said islands and that of Newfoundland shall be limited to the middle of the channel.

French Counter-Declaration,⁴ Versailles 1783.

* * * The King of Great Britain undoubtedly places too much confidence in the uprightness of His Majesty's intentions, not to rely upon his constant attention to prevent the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon from becoming an object of jealousy between the two nations.

As to the fishery on the coasts of Newfoundland, which has been the object of the new arrangements settled by the two sovereigns upon this matter, it is sufficiently ascertained by the fifth article of the treaty of peace signed this day, and by the declaration likewise delivered to-day by His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary; and His Majesty declares that he is fully satisfied on this head.

In regard to the fishery between the island of Newfoundland and those of St. Pierre and Miquelon, it is not to be carried on by either party but to the middle of the channel; and His Majesty will give the most positive orders that the French fishermen shall not go beyond this line. His Majesty is firmly persuaded that the King of Great Britain will give like orders to the English fishermen.¹

4. Treaty of Paris, 1814.

XIII. The French right of fishery upon the Great Banks of Newfoundland, upon the coasts of the island of that name, and of the adjacent islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, shall be replaced² upon the footing³ in which it stood in 1792.

III. TREATY STIPULATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES RESPECTING FISHERIES.

1. Treaty of Paris, 1783.⁴

2. Convention of London, 1818.

I. Whereas differences have arisen respecting the liberty claimed by the United States, for the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry, and cure fish, on certain coasts, bays, harbours, and creeks, of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, it is agreed between the high contracting parties, that the inhabitants of the said United States shall have forever, in common with the subjects of his Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands, on the western and northern coast of Newfoundland, from ¹ In 1788 the British Parliament passed an Act (28 George III. cap. 35) "to carry into effect the Treaty of Peace with France of 1763, and the declaration annexed thereto, relative to the Newfoundland fishery." The preamble to this Statute recites article XIII. of the Treaty of Utrecht (1713), Article V. of the Treaty of Versailles (1763), and the above declaration of the same date, and authorize the King in Council to give from time to time such "orders and instructions" as may seem necessary to fulfil the purposes of these various conventions.

³ What that footing was, in the opinion of the British Government, may be seen from a note sent by Lord Palmerston in 1838 to Count Sebastiani, the French Ambassador. See Pedley's "History of Newfoundland," Appendix VI. In 1857, a Convention between Great Britain and France, "relative to the rights of fishery on the Coast of Newfoundland and the neighbouring coasts," was concluded at London in 1857 (Hertslet's Treaties, vol. X., pp. 749-755), subject to ratification by the "Imperial Parliament of Great Britain and by the Provincial Legislature of Newfoundland, Her Britannic Majesty engaging to use her best endeavours to procure the passing of such laws." The additional concessions made to France by this convention aroused such opposition in the Newfoundland Legislature that the convention itself became a dead letter (See Pedley's "History of Newfoundland," p. 432, for the despatch withdrawing the proposals.)

the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen Islands, and also on the coasts, bays, harbours, and creeks, from Mount Joly on the southern coast of Labrador to and through the Streights of Belleisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson Bay Company : And that the American fishermen shall also have liberty forever to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland hereabove described, and of the coast of Labrador ; but so soon as the same, or any portion thereof shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled, without previous agreement for such purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground. And the United States hereby renounce forever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, or cure fish, on or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bay, creeks, or harbours, of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, not included within the above mentioned limits : Provided, however, that the American fishermen shall be admitted to enter such bays or harbours for the purpose of shelter and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever. But they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.¹

3. The Treaty² of Washington, 1854.

I. It is agreed by the high contracting parties, that in addition to the liberty secured to the United States fishermen by the Convention of October 20, 1818, of taking, curing, and drying fish on certain coasts of the British North American colonies therein defined, the inhabitants of the United States shall have, in common with the subjects of her Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind, except shell-fish, on the sea coasts and shores, and in the bays, harbours, and creeks of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and of the several islands thereunto adjacent, without being restricted to any distance from the shore ; with permission to land upon the coasts and shores of those colonies and the islands thereof, and also upon the Magdalen Islands, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish ; provided that in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with British fishermen in the peaceable use of any part of the said coast in their occupancy for the same purpose. It is understood that the above mentioned liberty applies solely to the sea fishery, and that the salmon and shad fisheries, and all fisheries in rivers and the mouths of rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for British fishermen. * * *

¹ The convention of 1818 was supplemented in 1819 by an Act of the British Parliament (59 George III. cap 38), to enable the British Government to make regulations for its effective enforcement. Under the authority of this Act an Imperial Order-in-Council was passed in the same year prohibiting all molestation of United States fishermen so long as they kept within the limits assigned to them by treaty (Hertslet's Treaties, Vol. X., pp. 635-636). In 1844, an Imperial Order-in-Council was passed confirming an Act passed in 1843 by the Prince Edward Island Legislature (6 Vict. cap. 14) to regulate fishing by United States citizens in the vicinity of that Province (Hertslet's "Treaties," Vol. X., pp. 636-638).

II. It is agreed by the high contracting parties that British subjects shall have, in common with the citizens of the United States, the liberty to take fish of every kind, except shell-fish, on the eastern sea-coasts and shores of the United States north of the 36th parallel of north latitude, and on the shores of the several islands thereunto adjacent, and in the bays, harbours, and creeks of the said sea-coasts and shores of the United States and of the said islands, without being restricted to any distance from the shore; with permission to land upon the said coasts of the United States and of the islands aforesaid for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish, provided that in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with the fishermen of the United States in the peaceable use of any part of the said coasts in their occupancy for the same purpose. It is understood that the above-mentioned liberty applies solely to the sea fishery, and that salmon and shad fisheries and all fisheries in rivers and mouths of rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for fishermen of the United States.¹

4. The Treaty of Washington, 1871.²

¹ Article V. provided that the treaty should remain in force ten years from the date when it came into operation, and further until the expiration of twelve months after either of the high contracting parties should give notice to the other of its wish to terminate it; each party being at liberty to give such notice to the other at the end of the said term of ten years, or at any time afterwards. The United States gave notice under this Article on the 17th of March, 1865, and the treaty lapsed on the 17th of March, 1866. For the Act of Congress of the United States, and the Acts of the Parliaments of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, and Great Britain, giving effect to the Treaty of 1854, see Hertslet's "Treaties," Vol. X. pp. 647-655.

² The fishing privileges extended to the fishermen of each country under Articles XVIII-XX of this treaty were co-extensive, geographically and otherwise, with those embodied in the treaty of 1854 above. Article XVI secured the admission of fish-oil and fish (except fresh water fish and fish preserved in oil), into the United States, and Articles XXII-XXV. provided for the settlement by arbitration of the amount that should be paid by the United States to compensate for the greater value of the British concession. The articles dealing with the fisheries were to continue in force for ten years, after which either party might give two years' notice of its wish to terminate them. The treaty took effect from the first of July, 1873, and the United States Government having given notice as provided, the fisheries articles lapsed in 1895. A treaty dealing with the fisheries question was negotiated at Washington in 1888 (Dom. Sess. Papers for 1888, No. 36), but it was not approved of by the United States Senate. An arrangement was proffered by the British plenipotentiaries as a modus vivendi pending the ratification of the treaty, and this arrangement was in 1890 embodied in an Act of the Canadian Parliament (53 Vict. cap. 19).

IV. TREATY STIPULATIONS WITH RUSSIA RESPECTING FISHERIES.

1. Convention of St. Petersburg,¹ 1824.

I. It is agreed that in any part of the Great Ocean, commonly called the Pacific Ocean, or South Sea, the respective citizens or subjects of the high contracting powers shall be neither disturbed nor restrained, either in navigation or in fishing, or in the power of resorting to the coasts, upon points which may not already have been occupied, for the purpose of trading with the natives, saving always the restrictions and conditions determined by the following articles.

IV. It is nevertheless understood that during a term of ten years, counting from the signature of the present convention, the ships of both Powers, or which belong to their citizens or subjects, respectively, may reciprocally frequent, without any hindrance whatever, the interior seas, gulfs, harbours, and creeks, upon the coasts² mentioned in the preceding article, for the purpose of fishing and trading with the natives of the country.

2. Convention of St. Petersburg,³ 1825.

I. It is agreed that the respective subjects of the high contracting parties shall not be troubled or molested, in any part of the ocean, commonly called the Pacific Ocean, either in navigating the same, in fishing therein, or in landing at such parts of the coast as shall not have been already occupied, in order to trade with the natives, under the restrictions and conditions specified in the following articles.

¹ Between Russia and the United States. As to its effect, Wharton (International Law Digest, vol. I., p. 111) says: "Russia having asserted, in 1822-24, an exclusive jurisdiction over the northwest coast and waters of America from Behring strait to the fifty-first degree of north latitude, this claim was resisted by the United States and Great Britain, and was surrendered in a convention between Russia and the United States, in April, 1824, for ten years (not technically renewed) and in a convention between Great Britain and Russia, in February, 1825, for ten years, re-established by the treaty of June, 1743. The Russian claim was disputed by J. Q. Adams, in his note to the Russian Minister of March 30, 1822."

VI. It is understood that the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, from whatever quarter they may arrive, whether from the ocean, or from the interior of the continent, shall forever enjoy the right of navigating freely, and without any hindrance whatever, all the rivers and streams which in their course towards the Pacific Ocean may cross the line of demarcation upon the line of coast described in Article III. of the present convention.¹

VII. It is also understood that, for the space of ten² years from the signature of the present convention, the vessels of the two powers, or those belonging to their respective subjects, shall mutually be at liberty to frequent, without any hindrance whatever, all the inland seas, the gulfs, havens, and creeks, on the coast³ mentioned in Article III., for the purpose, of fishing and of trading with the natives.

I. The Introduction of English Law into Upper Canada.

An Act¹ to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act² for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America," and to introduce the English Law as the Rule of Decision in all matters of controversy relating to Property and Civil Rights.

[15TH OCTOBER, 1792.

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act for making more effectual Provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America," it was amongst other things provided, "that in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights resort should be had to the laws of Canada³ as the rule for the decision of the same," such provision being manifestly and avowedly intended for the accommodation of His Majesty's Canadian subjects : AND WHEREAS, since the passing of the Act aforesaid, that part of the late Province of Quebec, now comprehended within the Province of Upper Canada, having become inhabited principally by British subjects born and educated in countries where the English laws were established, and who are unaccustomed to the laws of Canada, it is inexpedient that the provision aforesaid, contained in the said Act of the fourteenth year of his present Majesty, should be continued in this Province :

Be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act⁴ passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act the said provision, contained in the said Act of the fourteenth year of his present Majesty, be, and the same is hereby repealed; and the authority of the said laws of Canada, and every part thereof, as forming a rule of decision in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights, shall be annulled, made void, and abolished throughout this Province, and that the said laws, nor any part thereof as such, shall be of any force or authority within the said Province, nor binding on any of the inhabitants thereof.

II. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that nothing in this Act shall extend to extinguish, release or discharge, or otherwise affect any existing right, lawful claim or incumbrance, to and upon any lands, tenements or hereditaments within the said Province, or to rescind or vacate, or otherwise affect any contract or security already made and executed conformably to the usages prescribed by the said Laws of Canada.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the passing of this Act, in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights, resort shall be had to the laws of England, as the rule for the decision of the same.

IV. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that nothing in this Act shall extend, or be construed to extend, to repeal or vary any of the Ordinances made and passed by the Governor and Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec previous to the division of the same into the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, otherwise than as they are necessarily varied by the provisions herein mentioned.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all matters relative to testimony and legal proof in the investigation of fact, and the forms thereof, in the several Courts of Law and Equity within this Province, be regulated by the rules of evidence established in England.

VI. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that nothing in this Act contained shall vary or interfere, or be construed to vary or interfere with any of the subsisting provisions respecting Ecclesiastical rights or dues within this Province, or with the forms of proceeding in civil actions, or the jurisdiction of Courts already established, or to introduce any of the laws of England respecting the maintenance of the poor, or respecting bankrupts.

2. The Introduction of Trial by Jury into Upper Canada.

An Act¹ to Establish Trials by Jury.

WHEREAS the trial by jury has been long established and approved in our Mother Country, and is one of the chief benefits to be attained by a free Constitution ;

Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, that from and after the first day of December in this present year of Our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, all and every issue and issues of fact, which shall be joined in any action, real, personal, or mixed, and brought in any of His Majesty's courts of justice within the Province aforesaid, shall be tried and determined by the unanimous verdict of twelve jurors, duly sworn for the trial of such issue or issues, which jurors shall be summoned and taken conformably to the law and custom of England.

II. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that nothing herein contained shall prevent, or be construed to prevent, the said jurors from bringing in a special verdict.

APPENDIX E.

THE INTRODUCTION OF RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT INTO CANADA.

I. Lord Durham's Report.¹

* * * * *

Such are the lamentable results of the political and social evils² which have so long agitated the Canadas ; and such is their condition that at the present moment we are called on to take immediate precautions against dangers so alarming as those of rebellion, foreign invasion, and utter exhaustion and depopulation.³ When I look on the various and deep-rooted causes of mischief which the past inquiry has pointed out as existing in every institution, in the constitutions, and in the very composition of society throughout a great part of these Provinces, I almost shrink from the apparent presumption of grappling with these gigantic difficulties. Nor shall I attempt to do so in detail. I rely on the efficacy of reform in the constitutional system by which these colonies are governed, for the removal of every abuse in their administration which defective institutions have engendered. If a system can be devised which shall lay in these countries the foundation of an efficient and popular government, ensure harmony in place of collision between the various powers of the State, and bring the influence of a vigorous public opinion to bear on every detail of public affairs, we may rely on sufficient remedies being found for the present vices of the administrative system.

² The "results" and "evils" here mentioned are described in the previous part of the report. Amongst them are the struggle between the French and English races in Lower Canada, collisions between the Executive and the Legislative Assembly in different Provinces, collisions between the Legislative Councils and the Legislative Assemblies, abuse of the system of Provincial grants for local public works, want of vigorous administration of the royal prerogative, interference of the Colonial Department in the details of Colonial Government, irresponsibility of the Executive Council, the absence of any division of the public service into regular ministerial departments, the want of municipal institutions, the inefficient administration of justice in Lower Canada, defective means of education, the clergy reserves and the establishment of rectories, the want of means of communication between different parts of each Province, wasteful misappropriation of Crown lands, and lack of proper arrangements for the reception and disposition of immigrants. Some of these matters are dealt with at great length in the Appendixes to the Report.

³ Lord Durham felt and expressed the fear that an emigration of English speaking settlers from Upper Canada to the United States was likely to take place. He cites, in support of his position a number of cases which had come to his knowledge, and avows his belief that these emigrants were not all politically disaffected towards the Government.

The preceding pages have sufficiently pointed out the nature of those evils, to the extensive operation of which I attribute the various practical grievances, and the present unsatisfactory condition of the North American colonies. It is not by weakening, but strengthening the influence of the people on its government; by confining within much narrower bounds than those hitherto allotted to it, and not by extending the interference of the imperial authorities in the details of colonial affairs, that I believe that harmony is to be restored, where dissension has so long prevailed; and regularity and vigour, hitherto unknown, introduced into the administration of these Provinces. It needs no change in the principles of government, no invention of a new constitutional theory, to supply the remedy which would, in my opinion, completely remove the existing political disorders. It needs but to follow out consistently the principles of the British constitution, and introduce into the government of these great colonies those wise provisions, by which alone the working of the representative system can in any country be rendered harmonious and efficient. We are not now to consider the policy of establishing representative government in the North American colonies. That has been irrevocably done;¹ and the experiment of depriving the people of their present constitutional power is not to be thought of. To conduct their government harmoniously, in accordance with its established principles, is now the business of its rulers; and I know not how it is possible to secure that harmony in any other way than by administering the government on those principles which have been found perfectly efficacious in Great Britain.² I would not impair a single prerogative of the Crown; on the contrary I believe that the interests of the people of these colonies require the protection of prerogatives which have not hitherto been exercised.³ But the Crown must on the other hand, submit to the necessary consequences of representative institutions; and if it has to carry on the government in unison with a representative body, it must consent to carry it on by means of those in whom that representative body has confidence.

² Elsewhere in his Report (p. 29 of the British Parliamentary paper) Lord Durham, speaking of the freedom of the administration from the influence of the Legislative Assembly, says "This entire separation of the legislative and executive powers of a State is the natural error of governments desirous of being free from the check of representative institutions. Since the Revolution of 1688, the stability of the English Constitution has been secured by that wise principle of our government which has vested the direction of the national policy, and the distribution of patronage, in the leaders of the parliamentary majority."

In England this principle has been so long considered an indisputable and essential part of our constitution, that it has really hardly ever been found necessary to inquire into the means by which its observance is enforced. When a ministry ceases to command a majority in Parliament on great questions of policy, its doom is immediately sealed; and it would appear to us as strange to attempt for any time, to carry on a government by means of ministers perpetually in a minority, as it would be to pass laws with a majority of votes against them. The ancient constitutional remedies, by impeachment and stoppage of the supplies, have never since the reign of William III. been brought into operation for the purpose of removing a ministry. They have never been called for, because in fact it has been the habit of ministers rather to anticipate the occurrence of an absolutely hostile vote, and to retire when supported only by a bare and uncertain majority. If colonial legislatures have frequently stopped the supplies, if they have harassed public servants by unjust or harsh impeachments, it was because the removal of an unpopular administration could not be effected in the colonies by those milder indications of a want of confidence, which have always sufficed to attain the end in the Mother Country.

The means which have occasionally been proposed in the Colonies themselves appear to me by no means calculated to attain the desired end in the best way. These proposals indicate such a want of reliance on the willingness of the Imperial Government to acquiesce in the adoption of a better system, as, if warranted, would render an harmonious adjustment of the different powers of the State utterly hopeless. An elective Executive Council would not only be utterly inconsistent with monarchical government, but would really, under the nominal authority of the Crown, deprive the community of one of the great advantages of an hereditary monarchy. Every purpose of popular control might be combined with every advantage of vesting the immediate choice of advisers in the Crown, were the Colonial Governor to be instructed to secure the co-operation of the Assembly in his policy, by intrusting its administration to such men as could command a majority; and if he were given to understand that he need count on no aid from home in any difference with the Assembly, that should not directly involve the relations between the Mother Country and the colony. This change might be effected by a single despatch¹ containing such instructions; or if any legal enactment were requisite, it would only be one that would render it necessary that the official acts of the Governor should be countersigned by some public functionary. This would induce responsibility for every act of the Government, and, as a natural consequence, it would necessitate the substitution of a system of administration, by means of competent heads of departments, for the present rude machinery of an Executive Council.² The Governor, if he wished to retain advisers not possessing

² In a previous part of his report, Lord Durham gives this description of the Executive Council (p. 39): "It is a body of which the constitution somewhat resembles that of the Privy Council; it is bound by a similar oath of secrecy; it discharges in the same manner certain anomalous judicial functions; and its 'consent and advice' are required in some cases in which the observance of that form has been thought a requisite check on the exercise of particular prerogatives the confidence of the existing Assembly, might rely on the effect of an appeal to the people,¹ and, if unsuccessful, he might be coerced by a refusal of supplies, or his advisers might be terrified by the prospect of impeachment. But there can be no reason for apprehending that either party would enter on a contest, when each would find its interests in the maintenance of harmony; and the abuse of the powers which each would constitutionally possess, would cease when the struggle for larger powers became unnecessary. Nor can I conceive that it would be found impossible or difficult to conduct a Colonial Government with precisely that limitation of the respective powers which has been so long and so easily maintained in Great Britain.

I know that it has been urged that the principles which are productive of harmony and good government in the Mother Country, are by no means applicable to a colonial dependency. It is said that it is necessary that the administration of a colony should be carried on by persons nominated without any reference to the wishes of its people; that they have to carry into effect the policy, not of that people, but of the authorities at home; and that a colony which should name all its own administrative functionaries would in fact cease to be dependent. I admit that the system which I propose would in fact place the internal government of the colony in the hands of the colonists themselves; and that we should thus leave to them the execution of the laws, of which we have long entrusted the making solely to them. Perfectly aware of the value of our colonial possessions, and strongly impressed with the necessity of maintaining our connexion with them, I know not in what respect it can be desirable that we should interfere with their internal legislation in matters which do not affect their relations with the Mother Country. The matters which so concern us are very few.² The constitution of the form of government,—the regulation of foreign relations, and of trade with the Mother Country, the other British colonies and foreign nations,—and the disposal of the public lands, are the only points on which the Mother Country requires a control.³ This control is now sufficiently of the Crown. But in other respects it bears a greater resemblance to a Cabinet, the Governor being in the habit of taking its advice on most of the important questions of his policy. But as there is no division into departments in the Council there is no individual responsibility and no individual superintendence. Each member of the Council takes an equal part in all the business brought before it. The power of removing members being very rarely exercised, the Council is in fact for the most part composed of persons placed in it long ago; and the Governor is obliged either to take the advice of persons in whom he has no confidence, or to consult only a portion of the Council. The secrecy of the proceedings adds to the irresponsibility of the body; and when the Governor takes an important step, it is not known, or not authentically known, whether he has taken the advice of this Council or not, what members he has consulted, or by the advice of which of the body he has been finally guided."

² Lord Durham (Report, p. 30) says "it has never been very clearly explained what are the imperial interests" which make it necessary that "officers of Government should be nominated by the Crown, without any reference to the community, whose interests are entrusted to their keeping."

secured by the authority of the Imperial Legislature ; by the protection which the colony derives from us against foreign enemies ; by the beneficial terms which our laws secure to its trade ; and by its share of the reciprocal benefits which would be conferred by a wise system of colonization. A perfect subordination, on the part of the colony, on these points is secured by the advantages which it finds in the continuance of its connexion with the Empire. It certainly is not strengthened, but greatly weakened, by a vexatious interference on the part of the Home Government, with the enactment of laws for regulating the internal concerns of the colony, or in the selection of the persons entrusted with their execution. The colonists may not always know what laws are best for them, or which of their countrymen are the fittest for conducting their affairs ; but at least they have a greater interest in coming to a right judgment on these points, and will take greater pains, to do so than those whose welfare is very remotely and slightly affected by the good or bad legislation of these portions of the Empire. If the colonists make bad laws, and select improper persons to conduct their affairs, they will generally be the only, always the greatest sufferers ; and, like the people of other countries, they must bear the ills which they bring on themselves, until they choose to apply the remedy. But it surely cannot be the duty or the interest of Great Britain to keep a most expensive military possession of these colonies, in order that a Governor or Secretary of State may be able to confer colonial appointments on one rather than another set of persons in the colonies. For this is really the only question at issue. The slightest acquaintance with these colonies proves the fallacy of the common notion, that any considerable amount of patronage in them is distributed among strangers from the Mother Country. Whatever inconvenience a consequent frequency of changes among the holders of office may produce is a necessary disadvantage of free government, which will be amply compensated by the perpetual harmony which the system must produce between the people and its rulers. Nor do I fear that the character of the public servants will, in any respect, suffer from a more popular tenure of office. For I can conceive no system so calculated to fill important posts with inefficient persons as the present, in which public opinion is too little consulted in the original appointment, and in which it is almost impossible to remove those who disappoint the expectations of their usefulness, without inflicting a kind of brand on their capacity or integrity.

* * * * *

The important alteration in the policy of the Colonial Government which I recommend, might be wholly or in part effected for the present by the unaided authority of the Crown ; and I believe that the great mass of discontent in Upper Canada, which is not directly connected with personal irritation arising out of the incidents of the late troubles,¹ might be dispelled by an assurance that the government of the colony should henceforth be carried on in conformity with the views of the majority in the Assembly. But I think that for the well-being of the colonies and the security of the Mother Country, it is necessary that such a change should be rendered more permanent¹ than a momentary sense of the existing difficulties can ensure its being. I cannot believe that persons in power in this country will be restrained from the injudicious interference with the internal management of these colonies which I deprecate, while they remain the petty and divided communities which they now are. The public attention at home is distracted by the various and sometimes contrary complaints of these different contiguous Provinces. Each now urges its demands at different times, and in somewhat different forms, and the interests which each individual complainant represents as in peril are too petty to attract the due attention of the Empire. But if these important and extensive colonies should speak with one voice, if it were felt that every error of our colonial policy must cause a common suffering and a common discontent throughout the whole wide extent of British America, those complaints would never be provoked; because no authority would venture to run counter to the wishes of such a community, except on points absolutely involving the few imperial interests which it is necessary to remove from the jurisdiction of colonial legislation.²

It is necessary that I should also recommend what appears to me an essential limitation on the present powers of the representative bodies in these colonies. I consider good government not to be attainable while the present unrestricted powers of voting public money, and of managing the local expenditure of the community are lodged in the hands of an Assembly. As long as revenue is raised, which leaves a large surplus after the payment of the necessary expenses of the civil government, and as long as any member of the Assembly may, without restriction, propose a vote of public money, so long will the Assembly retain in its hands the powers which it everywhere abuses, of misapplying that money. The prerogative of the Crown which is constantly exercised in Great Britain for the real protection of the people, ought never to have been waived in the colonies; and if the rule of the Imperial Parliament, that no money vote should be proposed without the previous consent of the Crown,³ were introduced into these colonies, it might be wisely employed in protecting the public interests, now frequently sacrificed in that scramble for local appropriations, which chiefly serves to give an undue influence to particular individuals or parties.

² A Special Committee of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, of which the Hon. J. S. Macaulay was chairman, prepared a reply to Lord Durham's plea for responsible government. It is dated, May 11, 1839, and appears, with other comments on the Report, as Appendix G.G. to the Council's Journals for the session of that year.

2. Lord John Russell's Despatches.¹

(a) Instructions² to Lord Sydenham (Sept. 7th, 1839).

The intelligence which has reached me from Upper Canada makes it probable that you may be called upon for some explanation of the views of the Ministers of the Crown, on a question respecting which the Bill³ to which I have referred, is necessarily silent. I allude to the nature and extent of the control, which the popular branch of the United Legislature will be admitted to exercise over the conduct of the Executive Government; and the continuance in the public service of its principal officers. But it is evidently impossible to reduce into the form of a positive enactment, a constitutional principle of this nature. The importance of maintaining the utmost possible harmony between the policy of the Legislature and of the Executive Government, admits of no question; and it will of course be your anxious endeavour to call to your Counsels and to employ in the public service those persons who, by their position and character, have obtained the general confidence and esteem of the inhabitants of the Province.

¹ The text of these despatches is reprinted from a return to an address from the Legislative Assembly of Canada to the Governor-General, Lord Sydenham. The return is dated, August 17, 1841, and the address was adopted by the Assembly on the 5th of the same month. The latter was moved by Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Viger, and carried without a division. The return is printed as Appendix B.B. to the Assembly Journals of 1841, the first session of the first Parliament of the Province of Canada. It is worthy of note that when Lord Sydenham was asked by address of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada in the session of 1839 for copies of despatches from the Imperial Government relating to responsible Government, he evaded the request, though those here printed were then in his possession. That address was adopted by the Assembly on the 13th of December, 1839; on that day a despatch of the 16th of October from Lord John Russell to Lieut.-Governor Sir George Arthur, dealing with the tenure on which public offices were held, was brought down to the Assembly. No reply was made to the address of the 13th of December until the 14th of January, 1840, on which day Lord Sydenham sent a message regretting that it was "not in his power to communicate to the House of Assembly any despatches on the subject referred to," and adding: "The Governor-General has received Her Majesty's commands to administer the Government of these Provinces in accordance with the well understood wishes and interests of the people, and to pay to their feelings, as expressed through their representatives, the deference that is justly due to them. These are the commands of Her Majesty, and these are the views with which Her Majesty's Government desire that the administration of these Provinces should be conducted; and it will be the earnest and anxious desire of the Governor-General to discharge the trust committed to him, in accordance with these principles." The address to which this message was a reply had been moved by Mr. Sherwood and seconded by Mr. Rykert.

² The despatch containing the "instructions" from which the above extract is taken, will be found printed in full in the Assembly Journals of 1841, pp. 390-396. It was brought down in response to an address moved by Sir Allan McNab and seconded by Mr. Cartwright. Lord Sydenham arrived in Quebec on the 18th of October, 1839.

(b) Despatch to Lord Sydenham (October 14th, 1839).

DOWNING STREET, 14th October, 1839.

Sir,—It appears from Sir George Arthur's Despatches, that you may encounter much difficulty in subduing the excitement which prevails on the question of what is called "Responsible Government." I have to instruct you, however, to refuse any explanation which may be construed to imply an acquiescence in the Petitions and Addresses upon this subject. I cannot better commence this Despatch than by a reference to the Resolutions of both Houses of Parliament¹ of the 28th April and 9th May in the year 1837.

The Assembly of Lower Canada having repeatedly pressed this point, Her Majesty's Confidential Advisers at that period thought it necessary not only to explain their views in the communications of the Secretary of State, but expressly called for the opinion of Parliament on the subject. The Crown and the two Houses of Lords and Commons have thus decisively pronounced a judgment upon the question; you will consider yourself precluded from entertaining any proposition on the subject. It does not appear indeed, that any very definite meaning is generally agreed upon by those who call themselves the advocates of this principle, but its very vagueness is a source of delusion, and if at all encouraged, would prove the cause of embarrassment and danger.

The Constitution of England after long struggles and alternate success, has settled into a form of Government in which the prerogative of the Crown is undisputed, but is never exercised without advice. Hence the exercise only is questioned, and however the use of the authority may be condemned, the authority itself remains untouched.

This is the practical solution of a great problem—the result of a contest—which from 1640 to 1690 shook the Monarchy and disturbed the peace of the Country.

But if we seek to apply such a practice to a Colony, we shall at once find ourselves at fault. The power for which a Minister is responsible in England, is not his own power, but the power of the Crown, of which he is for the time the organ. It is obvious that the Executive Councillor of the Colony is in a situation totally different. The Governor under whom he serves receives his orders from the Crown of England. But can the Colonial Council be the Advisers of the Crown of England? Evidently not, for the Crown has other Advisers for the same functions, and with superior authority.

It may happen, therefore, that the Governor receives at one and the same time instructions from the Queen and advice from his Executive Council, totally at variance with each other. If he is to obey his instructions from England, the parallel of constitutional responsibility entirely fails; if on the other hand, he is to follow the advice of his Council, he is no longer a subordinate Officer, but an independent Sovereign.

There are some cases in which the force of these objections is so manifest, that those who at first made no distinction between the Constitution of the United Kingdom and that of the Colonies, admit their strength. I allude to the questions of foreign war and international relations whether of trade or diplomacy. It is now said that internal Government is alone intended.

But there are some cases of internal Government in which the honor of the Crown or the faith of Parliament, or the safety of the State are so seriously involved, that it would not be possible for Her Majesty to delegate the authority to a Minister in a Colony. I will put for illustration some of the cases which have occurred in that very Province, where the Petition for a responsible Executive first arose—I mean Lower Canada.

During the time when a large majority of the Assembly of Lower Canada followed Mr. Papineau as their leader, it was obviously the aim of that gentleman to discourage all who did their duty to the Crown within the Province, and to deter all those who should resort to Canada with British habits and feelings from without. I need not say that it would have been impossible for any Minister to support in the Parliament of the United Kingdom the measures which a Ministry, headed by Mr. Papineau, would have imposed upon the Governor of Lower Canada. British Officers punished for doing their duty,—British Emigrants defrauded of their property,—British Merchants discouraged in their lawful pursuits, would have loudly appealed to Parliament against Canadian Ministry, and would have demanded protection.¹

Let us suppose the Assembly, as then constituted, to have been sitting when Sir John Colborne suspended two of the Judges. Would any Councillor, possessing the confidence of the Assembly, have made himself responsible for such an act? And yet the very safety of the Province depended upon its adoption,—nay, the very orders of which Your Excellency is yourself the bearer respecting Messrs. Bedard and Panet, would never be adopted or put in execution by a Ministry depending for existence on a majority led by Mr. Papineau.

Nor can any one take upon himself to say that such cases will not again occur. The principle once sanctioned, no one can say how soon its application might be dangerous or even dishonorable, while all will agree that to recall the power thus conceded, would be impossible.

While I thus see insuperable objections to the adoption of the principle as it has been stated, I see little or none to the practical views of Colonial Government recommended by Lord Durham, as I understand them. The Queen's Government have no desire to thwart the Representative Assemblies of British North America in their measures of reform and improvement. They have no wish to make those Provinces the resource for patronage at home. They are earnestly intent on giving to the talent and character of leading persons in the Colonies advantages similar to those which talent and character employed in the public service, obtain in the United Kingdom. Her Majesty has no desire to maintain any system of policy among Her North American subjects which opinion condemns. In receiving the Queen's commands, therefore, to protest against any declaration at variance with the honour of the Crown and the unity of the Empire, I am at the same time instructed to announce Her Majesty's gracious intention to look to the affectionate attachment of Her people in North America as the best security for permanent dominion.

It is necessary for this purpose, that no official misconduct should be screened by Her Majesty's Representative in the Provinces, and that no private interests should be allowed to compete with the general good.

Your Excellency is fully in possession of the principles which have guided Her Majesty's advisers on this subject, and you must be aware that there is no surer way of earning the approbation of the Queen than by maintaining the harmony of the Executive with the Legislative authorities.

While I have thus cautioned you against any declaration from which dangerous consequences might hereafter flow, and instructed you as to the general line of your conduct, it may be said that I have not drawn any specific line beyond which the power of the Governor on one hand and the privilege of the Assembly on the other, ought not to extend. But this must be the case in any mixed Government. Every political Constitution in which different bodies share the supreme power, is only enabled to exist by the forbearance of those among whom this power is distributed. In this respect the example of England may well be imitated. The Sovereign using the Prerogative of the Crown to the utmost extent, and the House of Commons exerting its power of the purse to carry all its resolutions into immediate effect, would produce confusion in the country in less than a twelve month. So in a Colony, the Governor thwarting every legitimate proposition of the Assembly, and the Assembly continually recurring to its power of refusing supplies can but disturb all political relations, embarrass trade, and retard the prosperity of the people. Each must exercise a wise moderation. The Governor must only oppose the wishes of the Assembly where the honour of the Crown or the interests of the Empire are deeply concerned; and the Assembly must be ready to modify some of its measures for the sake of harmony and from a reverent attachment to the authority of Great Britain.

I have, etc.,

(Signed,)

J. RUSSELL.

The Right Honorable C. POULETT THOMSON, etc.

3. Legislative Assembly Resolutions, 1841.¹

(a) Proposed by Hon. Robert Baldwin.

1. That the most important as well as the most undoubted of the political rights of the people of this Province is that of having a Provincial Parliament for the protection of their liberties, for the exercise of their constitutional influence over the Executive Departments of their Government, and for legislation upon all matters which do not, on the grounds of absolute necessity, constitutionally belong to the jurisdiction of the Imperial Parliament, as the paramount authority of the Empire.

2. That the head of the Provincial Executive Government of the Province being within the limits of his Government, the representative of the Sovereign, is not constitutionally responsible to any other than the authorities of the Empire.

3. That the representative of the Sovereign for the proper conduct and efficient disposal of the public business is necessarily obliged to make use of the advice and assistance of subordinate officers in the administration of his Government.

4. That in order to preserve that harmony between the different branches of the Provincial Parliament which is essential to the happy conduct of public affairs the principal of such subordinate officers, advisers of the representative of the Sovereign, and constituting as such the Provincial administration under him as the head of the Provincial Government, ought always to be men possessed of the public confidence, whose opinions and policy harmonizing with those of the representatives of the people, would afford a guarantee that the well understood wishes and interests of the people, which Our Gracious Sovereign has declared shall be the rule of the Provincial Government, will at all times be faithfully represented to the head of that Government, and through him to the Sovereign and Imperial Parliament.

¹ The text of these resolutions is reprinted from the Assembly Journals of the first session of the first Parliament of Canada, pp. 480-482. The procedure leading to their adoption indicates a well-marked purpose. Lord Sydenham's first Executive Council was composed of Messrs. Sullivan, Dunn, Daly, Harrison, Ogden, Draper, Baldwin and Day. Mr. Baldwin withdrew from it, and on the 5th of August moved for the production of copies of Lord John Russell's despatches on responsible government, and of other papers on the same subject. The order was made and the return containing these documents was on the 20th of August laid on the table of the Assembly by Mr. Harrison. On the 3rd of September Mr. Baldwin moved the first series of resolutions here given, and the second series were moved by Mr. Harrison as amendments and adopted. It is generally admitted that Mr. Harrison's resolutions were drawn up by Lord Sydenham himself. A melancholy interest is added to these facts by the tragic end of his term of office. He was fatally injured on the 5th September by a fall from his horse. Parliament was prorogued by his substitute, Gen. Clitherow, at noon on the 18th, and he died early on the morning of the following day.

5. That as it is practically always optional with such advisers to continue in or retire from office at pleasure, this House has the constitutional right of holding such advisers politically responsible for every act of the Provincial Government of a local character, sanctioned by such Government while such advisers continue in office.

6. That for the like reason this House has the constitutional right of holding such advisers in like manner responsible for using, while they continue in office, their best exertions to procure from the Imperial authorities the exercise of their right of dealing with such matters affecting the interests of the Province as constitutionally belong to those authorities, in the manner most consistent with the well understood wishes and interests of the people of this Province.

(b) Proposed in amendment by Hon. S. B. Harrison.

1. That the most important, as well as the most undoubted, of the political rights of the people of this Province is that of having a Provincial Parliament for the protection of their liberties, for the exercise of a constitutional influence over the Executive Departments of their Government, and for legislation upon all matters of internal Government.

2. That the head of the Executive Government of the Province being, within the limits of his Government, the representative of the Sovereign is responsible to the Imperial authority alone; but that, nevertheless, the management of our local affairs can only be conducted by him, by and with the assistance, counsel and information, of subordinate officers in the Province.

3. That in order to preserve between the different branches of the Provincial Parliament that harmony which is essential to the peace, welfare and good Government of the Province the chief advisers of the representative of the Sovereign, constituting a Provincial administration under him, ought to be men possessed of the confidence of the representatives of the people, thus affording a guarantee that the well understood wishes and interests of the people, which our Gracious Sovereign has declared shall be the rule of the Provincial Government, will, on all occasions, be faithfully represented and advocated.

4. That the people of this Province have, moreover, a right to expect from such Provincial administration, the exertion of their best endeavours that the Imperial authority, within its constitutional limits shall be exercised in the manner most consistent with their well understood wishes and interests.¹

¹ The text of these resolutions is often quoted inaccurately, through following the version given in Scrope's "Life of Lord Sydenham." The biographer omits the first resolution altogether, and states that they were "carried unanimously." On the third resolution a division was taken and the yeas and nays were recorded. The vote stood 56 to 7, the members of the minority being Messrs. Burnett, Cartwright, MacNab (Sir A. N.), McLean, Moffatt (Hon. G.), Sherwood, Watts. For the subsequent history of responsible Government till its final recognition by Lord Elgin, see Kaye's "Life of Metcalfe," and Dent's "Forty Years," and Hinck's "Reminiscences." Lord Metcalfe in one of his papers, entitled "The System of Government," formulated an argument against the system, and in another, "Resignation of the Executive Council," he gave his version of the rupture between him and the first Baldwin-Lafontaine administration. See also Ryerson's and Sullivan's letters on the same subject, coupled with the pen-names respectively of "Leonidas" and "Legion."

APPENDIX F.

QUEBEC CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS,¹ 1864.

1. The best interests and present and future prosperity of British North America will be promoted by a federal² union, under the Crown of Great Britain, provided such union can be effected on principles just to the several Provinces.

2. In the federation of the British North American Provinces, the system of Government best adapted under existing circumstances to protect the diversified interests in the several Provinces, and secure efficiency, harmony and permanency in the working of the union, would be a general Government, charged with matters of common interest to the whole country; and Local Governments for each of the Canadas, and for the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, charged with the control of local matters in their respective sections; provision being made for the admission into the union, on equitable terms, of Newfoundland, the North-West Territory, British Columbia, and Vancouver.³

3. In framing a constitution for the general Government, the Conference, with a view to the perpetuation of our connection with the mother country,

¹ The text of these resolutions is reprinted from the Journals of the Legislative Assembly of Canada, 1865 (pp. 202-209). They were adopted as part of an address to the Queen, praying for the submission to the Imperial Parliament of a measure to unite into one Government the "Colonies of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island." The ordinary histories of Canada give ample information as to the events which brought about the Quebec Conference. The best special narrative of the whole period is contained in Gray's "Confederation; or the Political and Parliamentary History of Canada from the Conference at Quebec to the admission of British Columbia" (vol. I.). The author, Hon. John Hamilton Gray, was one of the delegates to the Conference from New Brunswick. The resolutions were adopted by the Conference on the 10th of October, 1864, and by the Legislative Assembly of Canada, after a long discussion and many unsuccessful attempts to secure modifications, on the 14th of March, 1865. A full report of the debates was in 1865 published "by order of the Legislature," under the title "Parliamentary Debates on the subject of the Confederation of the British North American Provinces." The text has been carefully compared with the versions of the resolutions given in Gray's "Confederation" and the "Debates on Confederation," the points of difference being noted where they occur.

² For a definition of the term "Federal," see Freeman's "History of Federal Government," vol. I, first two chapters. See also the essays of Hamilton and Madison in the "Federalist"; Story's "Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States"; Cooley's "Constitutional Law in the United States"; and numerous decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the Canadian Supreme Court, and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

and to the promotion of the best interests of the people of these Provinces, desire to follow the model of the British constitution so far as our circumstances will permit.

4. The Executive authority or government shall be vested in the Sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and be administered according to the well-understood principles of the British constitution, by the Sovereign personally, or by the representative of the Sovereign duly authorized.

5. The Sovereign or Representative of the Sovereign¹ shall be Commander in Chief of the land and naval militia forces.

6. There shall be a General Legislature or Parliament for the federated Provinces, composed of² a Legislative Council and a House of Commons.

7. For the purpose of forming the Legislative Council, the federated Provinces shall be considered as consisting of three divisions: 1st, Upper Canada, 2nd, Lower Canada, 3rd, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island: each division with an equal representation in the Legislative Council.

8. Upper Canada shall be represented in the Legislative Council by 24 members, Lower Canada by 24 members, and the three maritime Provinces by 24 members, of which Nova Scotia shall have 10, New Brunswick 10, and Prince Edward Island 4 members.³

9. The Colony of Newfoundland shall be entitled to enter the proposed union, with a representation in the Legislative Council of 4 members.

10. The North-West Territory, British Columbia and Vancouver shall be admitted into the union on such terms and conditions as the Parliament of the federated Provinces shall deem equitable, and as shall receive the assent of Her Majesty; and, in the case of the Province of British Columbia or Vancouver, as shall be agreed to by the Legislature of such Province.⁴

11. The members of the Legislative Council shall be appointed by the Crown under the great seal of the general government, and shall hold office during life; if any Legislative Councillor shall, for two consecutive sessions of Parliament, fail to give his attendance in the said Council, his seat shall thereby become vacant.

³ On account of the refusal of Prince Edward Island to join the Union this resolution was altered at the London Conference so as to give Nova Scotia and New Brunswick 12 members each, until the third Province should come in.

12. The members of the Legislative Council shall be British subjects by birth or naturalization, of the full age of thirty years, shall possess a continuous real property qualification of four thousand dollars over and above all incumbrances, and shall be and continue worth that sum over and above their debts and liabilities, but in the case of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island the property may be either real or personal.¹

13. If any question shall arise as to the qualification of a Legislative Councillor, the same shall be determined by the Council.

14. The first selection of the members of the Legislative Council shall be made, except as regards Prince Edward Island, from the Legislative Councils of the various Provinces, so far as a sufficient number be found qualified and willing to serve; such members shall be appointed by the Crown at the recommendation of the general executive Government, upon the nomination of the respective local Governments, and in such nomination due regard shall be had to the claims of the members of the Legislative Council of the opposition in each Province, so that all political parties may as nearly as possible be fairly represented.

15. The Speaker of the Legislative Council (unless otherwise provided by Parliament) shall be appointed by the Crown from among the members of the Legislative Council, and shall hold office during pleasure, and shall only be entitled to a casting vote on an equality of votes.

16. Each of the twenty-four Legislative Councillors representing Lower Canada in the Legislative Council of the general Legislature, shall be appointed to represent one of the twenty-four electoral divisions mentioned in Schedule A of chapter first of the Consolidated Statutes² of Canada, and such Councillor shall reside or possess his qualification in the division he is appointed to represent.

17. The basis of representation in the House of Commons shall be population, as determined by the official census every ten years; and the number of members at first shall be 194, distributed as follows:—

Upper Canada.....	82
Lower Canada.....	65
Nova Scotia.....	19
New Brunswick.....	15
Newfoundland.....	8
Prince Edward Island.....	5

18. Until the official census of 1871 has been made up, there shall be no change in the number of representatives from the several sections.

19. Immediately after the completion of the census of 1871, and immediately after every decennial census thereafter, the representation from each section in the House of Commons shall be readjusted on the basis of population.

20. For the purpose of such re-adjustments, Lower Canada shall always be assigned sixty-five members, and each of the other sections shall at each re-adjustment receive, for the ten years then next succeeding, the number of members to which it will be entitled on the same ratio of representation to population as Lower Canada will enjoy according to the census last taken by having sixty-five members.

21. No reduction shall be made in the number of members returned by any section, unless its population shall have decreased, relatively to the population of the whole union, to the extent of five per centum.

22. In computing at each decennial period the number of members to which each section is entitled, no fractional parts shall be considered, unless when exceeding one-half the number entitling to a member, in which case a member shall be given for each such fractional part.

23. The Legislature of each Province shall divide such Province into the proper number of constituencies, and define the boundaries of each of them.

24. The local Legislature of each Province may, from time to time, alter the electoral districts for the purposes of representation in such local Legislature, and distribute the representatives to which the Province is entitled in such local Legislature, in any manner such Legislature may see fit.¹

25. The number of members may at any time be increased by the general Parliament,—regard being had to the proportionate rights then existing.

26. Until provisions are made by the General Parliament, all the laws which, at the date of the proclamation constituting the union, are in force in the Provinces respectively, relating to the qualification and disqualification of any person to be elected, or to sit or vote as a member of the Assembly in the said Provinces respectively; and relating to the qualification or disqualification of voters and to the oaths to be taken by voters, and to returning officers and their powers and duties,—and relating to the proceedings at elections, and to the period during which such elections may be continued,—and relating to the trial of controverted elections, and the proceedings incident thereto,—and relating to the vacating of seats of members, and to the issuing and execution of new writs, in case of any seat being vacated otherwise than by a dissolution,—shall respectively apply to elections of members to serve in the House of Commons, for places situate in those Provinces respectively.

27. Every House of Commons shall continue for five years from the day of the return of the writs choosing the same, and no longer ; subject, nevertheless, to be sooner prorogued or dissolved by the Governor.

28. There shall be a session of the general Parliament once, at least, in every year, so that a period of twelve calendar months shall not intervene between the last sitting of the general Parliament in one session, and the first sitting thereof in the next session.

29. The general Parliament shall have power to make laws for the peace, welfare, and good government of the federated provinces (saving the sovereignty of England), and especially laws respecting the following subjects :—

- (1) The public debt and property.

- (33) Rendering uniform all or any of the laws relative to property and civil rights in Upper Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island, and rendering uniform the procedure of all or any of the courts in these Provinces; but any statute for this purpose shall have no force or authority in any Province until sanctioned by the Legislature thereof.²
- (34) The establishment of a general Court of Appeal for the federated Provinces.
- (35) Immigration.

31. The general Parliament may also, from time to time, establish additional courts, and the general Government may appoint judges and officers thereof, when the same shall appear necessary or for the public advantage, in order to the due execution of the laws of Parliament.

32. All courts, judges and officers of the several Provinces shall aid, assist and obey the general Government in the exercise of its rights and powers, and

² To this sub-section was added at the London Conference a clause providing that the power of altering, repealing, or amending laws so legislated upon "should thereafter remain with the general Government only."

For each of the Provinces there shall be an executive officer, styled the Lieutenant Governor, who shall be appointed by the Governor General in Council, under the Great Seal of the federated Provinces, during pleasure; such pleasure not to be exercised before the expiration of the first five years, except for cause; such cause to be communicated in writing to the Lieutenant Governor immediately after the exercise of the pleasure as aforesaid, and also by message to both Houses of Parliament, within the first week of the first session afterwards.

39. The Lieutenant Governor of each Province shall be paid by the general Government.

40. In undertaking to pay the salaries of the Lieutenant Governors, the Conference does not desire to prejudice the claim of Prince Edward Island upon the Imperial Government for the amount now paid for the salary of the Lieutenant Governor thereof.

41. The local Government and Legislature of each Province shall be constructed in such manner as the existing Legislature of such Province shall provide.

42. The local Legislatures shall have power to alter or amend their constitution from time to time.

- (18) And generally all matters of a private or local nature, not assigned to the general Parliament.

¹ In Gray's text this sub-section reads: "Direct taxation, and the imposition of duties on export of timber, logs, masts, spars, deals, and sawn lumber, and of coals and other minerals."

² The saving provision here applied to "both Canadas" was at the London Conference extended to minorities having in any Province, when the Union went into operation, legal rights or privileges as to denominational schools. It was at the same time further provided that "in any Province where a system of separate or dissentient schools by law obtains, or where the local Legislature may hereafter adopt a system of separate or dissentient schools, an appeal shall be to the Governor-General-in-Council of the general government from the acts and decisions of the local authorities, which may affect the rights or privileges of the Protestant or Catholic minority in the matter of education, and the general Parliament shall have power in the last resort to legislate on the subject."

³ This sub-section was omitted at the London Conference. See Note 1, p. 306.

⁴ "Penitentiaries" were at the London Conference transferred by resolution to the jurisdiction of the general Parliament.

44. The power of respiting, reprieving, and pardoning prisoners convicted of crimes, and of commuting and remitting of sentences in whole or in part which belongs of right to the Crown, shall be administered by the Lieutenant Governor of each Province in Council,¹ subject to any instructions he may, from time to time, receive from the general Government, and subject to any provisions that may be made in this behalf by the general Parliament.

MISCELLANEOUS.

45. In regard to all subjects over which jurisdiction belongs to both the general and local Legislatures, the laws of the general Parliament shall control and supersede those made by the local Legislature, and the latter shall be void so far as they are repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the former.

61. The debt of Canada, not specially assumed by Upper and Lower Canada respectively, shall not exceed, at the time of the union, $62,500,000; Nova Scotia shall enter the union with a debt not exceeding $8,000,000; and New Brunswick with a debt not exceeding $7,000,000.

62. In case Nova Scotia or New Brunswick do not incur liabilities beyond those for which their Governments are now bound, and which shall make their debts at the date of union less than $8,000,000 and $7,000,000 respectively, they shall be entitled to interest at five per cent. on the amount not so incurred, in like manner as is hereinafter provided for Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island; the foregoing resolution being in no respect intended to limit the powers given to the respective Governments of those Provinces, by Legislative authority, but only to limit the maximum amount of charge to be assumed by the general Government; provided always, that the powers so conferred by the respective Legislatures shall be exercised within five years from this date, or the same shall then lapse.

63. Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, not having incurred debts equal to those of the other Provinces, shall be entitled to receive, by half-yearly payments, in advance, from the general Government, the interest at five per cent. on the difference between the actual amount of their respective debts at the time of the union, and the average amount of indebtedness per head of the population of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

64. In consideration of the transfer to the general Parliament of the powers of taxation, an annual grant in aid of each Province shall be made, equal to eighty cents per head of the population, as established by the census of 1861; the population of Newfoundland being estimated at 130,000. Such aid shall be in full settlement of all future demands upon the general Government for local purposes, and shall be paid half-yearly in advance to each Province.¹

65. The position of New Brunswick being such as to entail large immediate charges upon her local revenues, it is agreed that for the period of ten years, from the time when the Union takes effect, an additional allowance of $63,000 per annum shall be made to that Province. But that so long as the liability of that Province remains under $7,000,000, a deduction equal to the interest on such deficiency shall be made from the $63,000.

66. In consideration of the surrender to the general Government, by Newfoundland, of all its rights in mines and minerals, and of all the ungranted and unoccupied lands of the Crown, it is agreed that the sum of $150,000 shall each year be paid to that Province, by semi-annual payments; provided that that Colony shall retain the right of opening, constructing and controlling roads and bridges through any of the said lands, subject to any laws which the general Parliament may pass in respect of the same.¹

67. All engagements that may, before the union, be entered into with the Imperial Government for the defence of the country, shall be assumed by the general Government.

68. The general Government shall secure, without delay, the completion of the Intercolonial Railway from Riviere du Loup, through New Brunswick, to Truro in Nova Scotia.²

69. The communications with the North-Western Territory, and the improvements required for the development of the trade of the great west with the seaboard, are regarded by this conference as subjects of the highest importance to the federated Provinces, and shall be prosecuted at the earliest possible period that the state of the finances will permit.

70. The sanction of the Imperial and local Parliaments shall be sought for the union of the Provinces, on the principles adopted by the Conference.

71. That Her Majesty the Queen be solicited to determine the rank and name of the federated Provinces.

72. The proceedings of the Conference shall be authenticated by the signatures of the delegates, and submitted by each delegation to its own Government; and the Chairman is authorized to submit a copy to the Governor General for transmission to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

¹ For the "statement and figures" used in the Quebec Conference as a means of arriving at the financial settlement contained in resolutions 54 to 66 inclusive, see Appendix to Gray's "Confederation," pp. 398-405.

² The delegates to the London Conference agreed with the Imperial Government as to the terms on which a loan to the United Provinces of £3,000,000 stg. for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway should be guaranteed. In 1867, these terms were embodied in an Act of the Imperial Parliament (30 & 31 Vict. cap. 16).

APPENDIX G.

CONSTITUTION¹ OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

WE the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

Section 1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section 2. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

¹ This document is re-printed from the text in the "History of the origin, formation, and adoption of the Constitution of the United States," by George Ticknor Curtis; but it has been carefully compared with several other texts, and especially with the official one contained in Poore's "Federal and State constitutions, colonial charters, and other organic laws of the United States." Curtis states that his text "has been compared with the Rolls in the Department of State." It is the third great national document in the evolution of the United States, the first being the "Declaration of Independence" of July 4, 1776, and the second the "Articles of Confederation" of July 9, 1778. All three documents were prepared and promulgated at Philadelphia, the date of the Constitution being September 17, 1787. The history by Curtis above mentioned is still one of the best sources of information on the subject, and another is Bancroft's "History of the Constitution," which has been re-printed as vol. vi. of the edition of his "History of the United States," published in 1886. A useful re-print of the Constitution will be found appended to Von Holst's "Constitutional Law of the United States," with references to the pages of the treatise on which the various topics are discussed, and to the author's great work on the history of the Constitution. Story's "Commentaries on the Constitution," Cooley's "Principles of Constitutional Law" and his "Constitutional Limitations," and Kent's "Constitutional Jurisprudence" (re-printed in 1889 as part of the "Blackstone" edition of his "Commentaries on American Law") are classical expositions of the law of the Constitution. Its practical operation has been described in Wilson's "Congressional Government," Von Holst's "Constitutional History," and Bryce's "American Commonwealth."

Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons.¹ The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to chuse three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware six, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.²

When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the Executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall chuse their Speaker³ and other officers; and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Section 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice-President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

¹ The "other persons" here implied were the slaves. Compare the fourteenth amendment (p. 331 below) with this part of the above sentence: "Which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons."

² The 65 members allowed to the first Congress became 105 after the first census was taken, while the unit of representation rose from 30,000 to 33,000 at the same time.

The Senate shall chuse their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.¹

The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.²

Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honour, trust or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to law.

Section 4. The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of chusing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Section 5. Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties, as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy, and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

² There have been five impeachments under the joint authority of this sub-section and the last sub-section of section 2, namely: (1) Of Senator William Blount, in 1799; (2) of Judge John Pickering, in 1803; (3) of Judge Samuel Chase, in 1804; (4) of Judge James H. Peck, in 1830; and (5) of President Andrew Johnson, in 1868. In the last case, the only one of impeachment of a President, Chief Justice Chase presided. A good account of the proceedings is to be found in Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress," vol. II, chapter XIV., and in McCulloch's "Men and Measures of Half a Century," chapter XXVI. The vote stood 35 for conviction, and 19 for acquittal.

Section 6. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States.¹ They shall in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.²

Section 7. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.³

Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it becomes law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return⁴ it, with his objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

² Compare this provision with sections 11, 41, 63, 64, 84, and 88 of the Confederation Act, 1867, and the documents in Appendix E, relating to responsible government (pp. 293-304 above).

⁴ The word "veto," popularly used in connection with the President's action here specified, nowhere occurs in the constitution, and does not correctly describe his functions in the matter.

Section 8. The Congress shall have power¹ to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish an uniform rule of naturalization,² and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

To establish post offices and post roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings³ and discoveries⁴;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the laws of nations;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years⁵;

To provide and maintain a navy;

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district⁶ (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings ;—and

To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

Section 9. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.¹

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

No capitation, or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.²

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another : nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law ; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States : and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign State.

Section 10. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation ; grant letters of marque and reprisal ; coin money ; emit bills of credit ; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts ; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws : and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any State on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States ; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops, or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

² Inserted in compliance with the demand of the delegates from the South as a measure of protection against adverse fiscal legislation.

ARTICLE II.

Section 1. The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term¹ of four years, and, together with the Vice-President, chosen for the same term, be elected, as follows :—

Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of Electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress : but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each ; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed ; and if there be more than one who have such majority and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by ballot one of them for President ; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said house shall in like manner chuse the President. But in chusing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote ; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the Electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by ballot the Vice-President.²

The Congress may determine the time of chusing the Electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes ; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President ; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.¹

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services, a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation :—

“ I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.”

Section 2. The President shall be Commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States ; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur ; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint, Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law : but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of Departments.

The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session.

Section 3. He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient ; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper ; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers ; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

¹ It has been provided by Act of Congress that in the last resort the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall assume the duties of President, until a new President is elected.

Section 4. The President, Vice-President and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.¹

ARTICLE III.

Section 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.²

Section 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, made, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact; with such exceptions, and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

Section 3. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Section 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

Section 2. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

No person held to service¹ or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

Section 3. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union ; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State ; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States ; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section 4. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened,) against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing amendments, which in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress ; provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.¹

ARTICLE VI.

All debts contracted and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.²

Done in Convention by the unanimous consent of the States present the seventeenth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven³ and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names.⁴

GO. WASHINGTON—

Presidt and deputy from Virginia.

¹ Randolph and Mason, of Virginia, and Gerry of Massachusetts, refused to sign the Constitution because no provision was made for allowing State Conventions to offer amendments which should be submitted to and finally decided by another general Convention, before the Constitution was adopted. Under this article as it stands the first Congress, on the 25th of September, 1789, proposed to the Legislatures of the several states the first ten of the "Amendments" given below, which were ratified by more than the necessary three-fourths of the States. The other five amendments were adopted at later dates. See Notes on pp. 329-332 below.

² The date fixed for the beginning of the operations of Government under the new Constitution was March 4, 1789, and by that day it had been ratified by Conventions chosen for that purpose in Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, and New York. This was two states more than the necessary number, and North Carolina and Rhode Island, all that were left of the original 13, ratified it a few months afterwards. Vermont, after having in Convention ratified the Constitution, was in 1791, by Act of Congress, admitted into the Union "as a new and entire member of the United States." The old Congress in September, 1788, declared that the Constitution had been duly ratified, and set dates for the election of President and the assembling of the first Constitutional Congress.

³ The Convention on the same date drew up resolutions intimating to Congress the mode in which the new constitutional machinery should be put in operation.

⁴ The Constitution was signed by 38 "deputies" besides Washington, and by the Secretary as a witness. At Franklin's suggestion the formula of subscription adopted was that the Constitution had received "the unanimous consent of the States present." Hamilton wrote the names of the States in geographical order on the parchment, but his own signature was inserted in a peculiar way. Curtis in his "History of the Constitution" says that "New York was not regarded as officially present; but in order that the proceedings might have all the weight that a name of so much importance could give to them, in the place that should have been filled by this State was recited the name of 'Mr. Hamilton of New York.'"

AMENDMENTS¹ OF THE CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

ARTICLE II.

A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III.

ARTICLE V.

¹ The official title of this document is " Articles in addition to, and amendment of, the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the several states, pursuant to the fifth Article of the original Constitution."

² The first ten of these Articles were " proposed " by the first Congress in 1789, and were between that year and 1791 ratified by the following States: New Jersey, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Virginia. Poore (" Federal and States Constitutions ") states that " there is no evidence on the journals of Congress that the Legislatures of Connecticut, Georgia, and Massachusetts ratified them." Some of the amendments were suggested by States which would have preferred to modify parts of the original Constitution had it been open to them to do so.

ARTICLE VI.

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII.

ARTICLE VIII.

ARTICLE IX.

The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X.

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE XI.

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State.¹

ARTICLE XII.

The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for President and Vice President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and of the number of votes for each; which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March, next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President.

The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.¹

ARTICLE XIII.

Section 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Section 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.²

¹ The twelfth amendment was proposed by the eighth Congress in 1803, and in 1804 was declared to have been ratified by all the states except New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Delaware. It took the place of the original third sub-section of the first section of Article II. (p. 323 above). Under that sub-section each "elector" was required to vote for two persons without designating them as "President" and "Vice-President" respectively, the candidate receiving the largest number of votes, if that were a majority of the whole, to be President, and the candidate receiving the next largest to be Vice-President. In 1800 Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, the candidates of what was then called the "Republican" party, received 73 electoral votes each, and John Adams 65. Jefferson had been his party's candidate for the Presidency, but his political opponents endeavoured to defeat him by voting for Burr in the House of Representatives, which had the election in its hands. Thirty-six ballots were taken before this scheme was finally defeated and Jefferson elected, and the twelfth amendment was adopted to prevent the recurrence of so dangerous a crisis. The Hayes-Tilden contest in 1876 developed a crisis of a different kind, which was met by a temporary device instead of a constitutional amendment (see McCulloch's "Men and Measures of Half a Century," chap. xxvi.; and Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress," chap. xxv).

² The thirteenth amendment was "proposed" early in 1865 by the thirty-eighth Congress, and before the end of that year was officially declared to have been ratified by 27 of the then 36 states, namely: Illinois, Rhode Island, Michigan, Maryland, New York, West Virginia, Maine, Kansas, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Missouri, Nevada, Indiana, Louisiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Vermont, Tennessee, Arkansas, Connecticut, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Alabama, North Carolina, and Georgia. The States of New Jersey, Oregon, California, Iowa, and Florida ratified the amendment after the official declaration of its adoption. Mississippi, Kentucky, Delaware, and Texas took no action. This amendment was the natural sequel to President Lincoln's "Emancipation Proclamation," which was issued on the 22nd of September, 1862, to take effect a hundred days later, on the first of January, 1863. For a full account of the Congressional proceedings connected with the amendment see Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress" (vol. I., chapters xxiv.-xxv.).

ARTICLE XIV.

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Section 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion, or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.¹

Section 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

Section 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Section 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.²

² The fourteenth amendment was "proposed" by the thirty-ninth Congress in June, 1866. In July, 1868, it was formally declared to have been ratified by 30 of the 37 states, namely: Connecticut, New Hampshire, Tennessee, New Jersey, Oregon, Vermont, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, New York, Ohio, Illinois, West Virginia, Kansas, Maine, Nevada, Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Iowa, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, Alabama. Of these states New Jersey and Ohio withdrew their consent before the declaration of 1868. Georgia, North Carolina, and South Carolina rejected the amendment and afterwards ratified it. Delaware, Kentucky, California, and Maryland rejected it conclusively. Mississippi,

ARTICLE XV.

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.¹

Texas, and Virginia do not appear to have taken any action. Secretary Seward in his certificate, on which the President's proclamation of the amendment is based, declines to recognize the right of Ohio and New Jersey to withdraw consent once regularly given. The text of these documents is given in Macpherson's "History of the Reconstruction," pp. 379-380. The object of the amendment was to secure for the recently emancipated slaves the exercise of the political franchise, and the states then recently in rebellion were constrained to accept the amendment as the price of their own representation in Congress. See Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress," vol. II., chapter ix.

¹ The fifteenth amendment was "proposed" in February, 1869, by the fortieth Congress to the State Legislatures, and was formally declared in March, 1870, to have been ratified by 29 of the 37 states. The assenting states were: West Virginia, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Maine, Louisiana, Michigan, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, New York, New Hampshire, Nevada, Vermont, Virginia, Alabama, Missouri, Mississippi, Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Nebraska, Texas. The dissenting states were: Delaware, Kentucky, California, Maryland, New Jersey, all of which rejected the amendment, Tennessee, in which one House rejected the amendment and the other shelved it, and Oregon, from which no action was reported. New York withdrew her assent, but the withdrawal, as before (see note 2, p. 331 above), was not recognized. Ohio first rejected and afterwards ratified the amendment and was counted affirmatively. Georgia ratified it, but too late to be counted in the proclamation. For proceedings in Congress and the various State Legislatures see Macpherson's "History of the Reconstruction" (pp. 399-406, 488-498, 557-562, 545-72). See also Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress," vol. II., chapter xvi.

PROPOSED¹ AMENDMENTS OF THE CONSTITUTION.First Congress, 1789.

ARTICLE I. After the first enumeration required by the first article of the Constitution, there shall be one Representative for every thirty thousand, until the number shall amount to one hundred, after which the proportion shall be so regulated by Congress that there shall be not less than one hundred Representatives, nor less than one Representative for every forty thousand persons, until the number of Representatives shall amount to two hundred, after which the proportion shall be so regulated by Congress that there shall not be less than two hundred Representatives, nor more than one Representative for every fifty thousand persons.

ARTICLE II. No law, varying the compensation for the services of the Senators and Representatives, shall take effect until an election of Representatives shall have intervened.²

Eleventh Congress, 1809.

If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them or either of them.³

Thirty-Sixth Congress, 1861.

ARTICLE XIII. No amendment shall be made to the Constitution which will authorize or give to Congress the power to abolish or interfere, within any State, with the domestic institutions thereof, including that of persons held to labor or service by the laws of said State.⁴

¹ Adopted in Congress by the necessary two-thirds majority in each House, but not ratified by the necessary three-fourths majority of States, after being "proposed" to them by Congress.

² These were the first two of a series of twelve articles "proposed" by the first Congress for ratification by the States. The other ten were ratified and are now the first ten amendments to the Constitution (see pp. 323-332 above), but these two were rejected.

³ The mover of this proposed amendment in the House of Representatives "considered the vote on that question as deciding whether or not we were to have members of the 'Legion of Honor' in this country." It was opposed by only three members, but was not ratified by the necessary number of States to give it a place in the Constitution. (See Tuckers' "History of the United States," vol. II, p. 383).

⁴ This amendment was adopted in Congress after the retirement of the representatives of the original seceding States—South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Florida, Louisiana, Alabama and Texas. It was intended to conciliate the Southern people and put a stop to the secession movement. It was adopted in the House of Representatives by a majority of 163 to 65, being supported by many men who have since been prominent in the Republican party, including Sherman of Ohio, Adams of Massachusetts, and Windom of Minnesota. It was adopted in the Senate by a majority of 24 to 12. It was supported in that House by Morrill, and was not opposed by Seward or Fessenden. Only two states, Ohio and Maryland, ratified it. In New England it was rejected, and many other states took no action, as it was evident that the secession movement was beyond the reach of such influences (Blaine's "Twenty Years of Congress," Vol. I, chapter xii.)
